Revolt in Russia Bared by Chinese

By RAY RICHARDS
Special Cable Dispatch to Boston Evening American

NANKING, Jan. 24—The Chinese government intelligence services have learned that the first large rebellion in the history of the Soviet government is flaring in the southern Ukraine.

This was revealed exclusively to the Hearst newspapers today by Chen Li Fu, minister of party organization in the Chinese National government.

More than 1,500,000 anti-Moscow insurrectionists are involved in the uprising, according to the Chinese information.

Chen said the southern Ukrainian population is supporting a big guerrilla force which Soviet troops have been unable to corner and subdue.

He said the information links up with reports of rebellious unrest throughout Russia and may be the beginning of eventual collapse of the whole Soviet structure which "contains the seeds of its own inevitable destruction because of the use of force to impose a political system." He added:

"The Stalin gang believes they must give the Russian masses the impression that Moscow is beating the world, or else these masses will rise up and overthrow the inhuman Soviet dictatorship."

Chen who holds one of the most powerful positions in the Nanking government, extremely close to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and has been director since 1925 of national Communist detection work, said the Ukraine insurrection has been gathering force for months behind an especially heavy iron curtain.

Moscow is conducting deportations of sections of the population to Siberia but has been unable to quell the hundreds of thousands of guerrillas hiding in the dense forests and striking frequently at the Soviet forces. The guerrillas are trying to enlist World War veterans of other Soviet states in a major, all-Russia revolution.

Chen said:

"The latest confirmation of our information regarding the Ukrainian rebellion was brought to China by William George, a college professor who served six years in the Russian army and

Daring Driver Foils Runaway Truck Tragedy

Presence of mind of John Fallon, 28, of Norcross st., Arlington, driver of a Hood milk truck, probably saved the lives of several persons today when the heavy vehicle rolled out of control down the steep hill of Hull st., North End, toward a line of traffic in Commercial st.

Fallon, who chased the truck almost 100 yards when its brakes slipped on the crest of the hill while he was making a delivery, managed to land on the running-board with a flying leap as he saw the impending danger.

Although bounced almost under the wheels when the truck struck a rut, he clung desperately to the steering wheel and jerked it to send the heavy truck slamming into the wall of the North Terminal garage.

But for his courage and determination, the truck would have roared unchecked into the long line of traffic.

He and his helper, Peter Melanson, of Main st., Charlestown, had completed most of their deliveries, so that the bulk of the truck's load was empty bottles.

Super-Icebreaker On To Open Hudson River

The "super-icebreaker," Eastwind, sails for New York Monday to open the ice-choked Hudson river, the Coast Guard here announced today. There is heavy ice from Albany as far south as the George Washington bridge.

The 6315-ton vessel will run the Hudson for the duration of the ice season and "can easily break 10 to 15 feet of ice," the Coast Gaurd said.

Winthrop Girl Held On Hiding Nazi PW

Gloria Eleanor Sanmartino, 25, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Sanmartino, Revere st., Winthrop, one-time kitchen employe at Murphy General Hospital, Waltham, was arraigned before the U. S. commissioner in St. Louis today on a charge of harboring a German wa rprisoner who escaped from Ft. Devens a year ago.

The girl met the prisoner, Rudolf von Hyeburg, when he was assigned to work at the hospital. After being warned several times against fraternization with Hyeburg, she quit her job at the hospital and went to work in a Boston department store.

The day after his escape, she was seen with him in the department store just after she had drawn her pay. The German, captured in Tunisia in 1943, has been turned over to the FBI.

16 RH Blood Donors Aid Man

Sixteen donors of the rare RH negative, type A blood came forward today to answer an emergency call from City Hospital on behalf of George Walsh, 49, Boston roofer, who has been critically ill at the hospital for the past five days.

Meanwhile, another appeal was sounded in behalf of Mrs. Mary Calcagno, 26, a widow mother of four children, who is seriously ill at the same hospital. Blood donors were asked by her brother-in-law, Joseph A. Calcagno, in an appeal made to newspapers.

Pauley Charges Lie, Politics to Stassen

By FRANK E. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (INS)—Edwin W. Pauley today accused Harold E. Stassen of "ignorance and falsehood in pursuit of his own selfish ambitions" in the Stassen crusade" against grain speculators.

Pauley took the witness stand at the Senate investigation into commodity trading and blasted at Stassen's charges that he made a million dollars on the basis of inside information.

The California millionaire and assistant to Army Sec. Royall, declared he had been "seriously and perhaps irreparably damaged by Stassen's falsehoods and unfounded charges," and added:

"I charge that he has combined ignorance and falsehood to indict men solely in the pursuit of his own selfish ambitions."

Accusing the former Minnesota governor of using his charges as a ladder to the GOP presidential nomination, Pauley declared:

"I challenge Harold Stassen to prove . . . that Pauley's purchases were synchronized with those of the government."

In his opening statement, Pauley also slapped at the committee, headed by Sen. Ferguson (R.) of Michigan. Pauley asserted the committee permitted Stassen to use it "as a forum from which to broadcast a series of false charges concerning me," and demanded:

"On the basis of my records, my appearance before you, and my answer to Harold Stassen, I ask you in simple fairness to clear my name of the vicious charge that I ever received or profited from inside information."

In charging that Stassen has shown ignorance, Pauley said Stassen's testimony revealed that he had a shocking and abysmal lack of understanding about how the grain markets operate.

Home Operation Saves Baby's Life

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 24 (AP)—An emergency home operation performed with a scissors was credited today with saving the life of a 14-month-old baby who almost choked to death.

The operation was performed on Anthony Gladwell by Dr. Robert Hughes, 31, a surgeon and neighbor of the Gladwells.

Anthony's mother said the child, suffering from a respiratory infection, had difficulty breathing. The father gave the baby a glass of water and he began choking. Dr. Hughes was summoned, made an incision in the child's windpipe and inserted a plastic bubble straw to allow air into the respiratory system.

Somerville Boy Held Without Bail in Knife Killing of Father

Fifteen-year-old Albert D. Laliberte, Jr., arraigned in a closed session of Somerville District Court on a charge of murder of his father—which police say he claimed he did to save his mother's life—was ordered held without bail today for hearing Feb. 7. The boy who police said readily admitted he had plunged a kitchen knife into the back of his father as the latter throttled his mother, talked for a few minutes with his anxious mother in the court room before he was arraigned before Judge Charles F. Gadsby.

The judge ordered a plea of not guilty entered and, at the request of Police Capt. John J. Killourhy, continued the case. The boy was taken to East Cambridge jail.

The youngster, one of three children, was booked on a murder charge after lengthy questioning by Insp. John F. O'Brien.

"I was afraid he was going to choke my mother to death," Insp. O'Brien quoted the youth as saying. "He knocked her down and kept choking her."

Mrs. Laliberte told police a similar story. She said her husband had been drinking and continued an argument through the supper period and then began to drink some more.

In the apartment at the time of the killing were the accused youth's younger brothers, Roland, 8, and Francis, 6.

According to the version given police, Laliberte at one time berated his son for not getting a job, even daring him to fight. It was then that Mrs. Laliberte threatened to telephone police and was thrown to the floor when she made such an attempt.

Dr. Charles E. Rosenthal was called to the house soon after arrival of police. He pronounced the victim dead and Dr. Andrew C. Guthrie, medical examiner, was summoned.

Young Laliberte was taken to Somerville police headquarters and held for several hours as a delinquent. Later he was charged with murder.

Jacqueline's Fate To Juvenile Court

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24 (AP)—Juvenile authorities will determine what, if anything, to do with 15-year-old Jacqueline (Jackie) Horner and the young sailor who befriended the runaway Hollywood piano prodigy during her eight-day fling in San Francisco night life.

Superior Judge I. L. Harris refused yesterday to hold the seaman, 19-year-old Wallace Wells of Hood river, Ore., on charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. He referred both cases to juvenile court.

Jackie declared the sailor was "gentlemanly and nice" at all times.

Atty. Paul Hill, representing Jackie's mother, Mrs. Clara Horner, announced he would oppose any effort to make the girl a ward of juvenile court.

Blizzard Due To Bury Hub In 12-In. Snow

Snow began falling in Boston shortly after noon today and the weather bureau warned it would develop into a blizzard burying most of New England under a 12-inch blanket.

The storm started on the heels of winter's coldest weather which plunged the mercury in Boston to an official 2 above mark—lowest reading here in two years. Temperatures will remain below freezing during the blizzard, the Weather Bureau said, and more sub-zero cold will follow. Several inland Bay State communities reported 20 below readings this morning.

Northeast winds reaching gale force along the coast will accompany the new storm which the forecaster said would last "well into Sunday."

STORM WARNINGS

Motorists were warned to keep their cars off the roads. The forecaster said the snow would be "dry and powdery, with considerable drifting." He added that there would be abnormally high tides tonight.

With the cold moderating "only slightly" during the storm, "more cold air" will follow, the weatherman cautioned.

Winter's worst storm was moving up from the Carolinas. It hit Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, Md., early this morning, reducing visibility to zero, and the storm increased in intensity as the day wore on.

Storm warnings were displayed today from Eastport to Block Island and the weather bureau said only extreme northern Maine is likely to escape the new fall.

Already this winter, Boston has had an accumulation of 49.8 inches of snow, the forecaster said. The accumulation for the entire winter last year was under 20 inches, he said.

21 BELOW ZERO BRINGS ICEQUAKE

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 24 (AP)—Two long cracks were opened in the snow surface of a field and ice was knocked from the roof of a shaken house today by what Roger L. Arringdale, Yarmouth seismologist, said he believed was "contraction of the earth's crust due to extreme temperatures."

The thermometer dropped to an official 21 degrees below zero at Portland's municipal airport, near the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leon A. Harris, who reported they were awakened by an "awful shock" about 3:30 a. m.

The fissures in the snow were about 100 feet long, Mrs. Harris said. A section of snow and ice about five feet long and four feet wide fell from the roof of her home.

28 BELOW IN WARE

This morning's cold was the bitterest of the winter, generally throughout all New England. An unofficial record low of 28 below was reported in Ware. The Concord weather station thermometer dipped to 20 below, the coldest there in five years.

Except for a few scattered areas the temperatures were be-

Dom DiMaggio, Wellesley Girl, to Wed

Fenway Park lost a bit of its romantic aura today when Cupid removed the most eligible bachelor on the Red Sox team from the dreamy aspirations of Ladies' Day rooters.

It is an attractive Wellesley brunette with whom centerfielder Dominic DiMaggio will walk down the center aisle of a church at a time and place to be designated shortly by the couple, now in San Francisco.

Miss Emily Frederick, 24, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Frederick of Woodcliff rd., telephoned her family the news after it leaked out during a family gathering of the DiMaggios in their home city. Her family made a formal confirmation of the engagement.

The couple met in 1945, when Emily was a USO entertainer and Dom was in the Coast Guard, touring New England with a service ball team. They did not meet again until last year, and she was his guest at the 1947 World Series.

A graduate of Dana Hall and Katharine Gibbs Schools, the girl left here early in January for a visit with relatives in Los Angeles. Dom drove 500 miles from his native San Francisco to greet her and she then traveled to San Francisco to visit an aunt there.

She was expected back here by the end of January, but Dom announced in San Francisco that her plans were now uncertain until the wedding arrangements are decided upon.

Boston fandom is hoping for a wedding here at which they can do the tossing—with rice.

Miami Hotels Hit By Slump, Pioneer Pins It on Owners

By RUTH BRIGHAM

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 24 (INS)—Miami Beach's billion-dollar hotel industry—only a ghost of its former postwar self—was spanked soundly today by one of its members for what he termed "malpractices in the trade."

Walter Jacobs, pioneer Miami Beach hotel operator and owner of the ocean front Lord Tarleton, charged that many hotels in the area had:

1—Charged dishonest rates, or $40 per day for rooms listed at $28 because they could get the difference during the past two years.

2—Misled through advertising, listing $15 rates for rooms of double occupancy, instead of the $30 actually charged. Today's papers bear out this charge.

3—Jacked up rates without ample notice.

4—Insisted on payment in advance.

5—Quoted different rates to different persons for the same accommodations.

6—Raised their rates (this year) by changing to American plan, thus upping approximately $12 per day and adding only dinner.

7—Used "turkey money"—or paid taxi drivers to steer guests their way.

The slump in tourist business to date has resulted in empty rooms, some panicky reductions as much out of line as the increases of the past two seasons, and a number of foreclosures.

A survey by International News Service revealed that the legitimate operators—those in the business on a long-range period—are becoming concerned.

The Miami Beach hotel business is a complex one. Because of the money involved, only five or six hotels on the beach are owned outright by the operators.

As the hotels have increased in number, they have also increased in partnerships until today many hotels have as many as 12 owners.

These owners don't always operate the hotels, but lease them to hotel men on from two to ten-years leases.

The average beach front hotel, with approximately 100 rooms, is leased at around $160,000 per year.

Jacobs, whose hotel has attracted the same people (millionaires and high-salaried members of the theatrical profession) for years, predicted:

"In spite of the ill will, this will be a record February. But the honeymoon is over. Tomorrow's successful hotel man will again be the one who meets his guests—not the one who speculates on them."

Balk Fraulein On U. S. Visa to Claim Estate

BERLIN, Jan. 24 (AP)—Red-haired Ursula Bauer sat in her cold flat here today and expressed the forlorn hope she might obtain a visa to enter the United States and stake her claim to a fortune which is in litigation in Philadelphia.

Miss Bauer, who is 23 and a secretary, yesterday had a day of glory as a "dollar princess" in Berlin newspapers, which reported her claim that she was heiress to a fortune left by a great-aunt who died in the United States.

As evidence she presented a one-year-old notice from the Orphans Court in Philadelphia asking her to attend a hearing of "your claim of alleged relationship to Henrietta E. Garrett," whose estate is in litigation.

F. A. Lane, U. S. consul-general here, said Miss Bauer's chances of getting a United States visa are slim, since certification from the American military government that her trip would be "in the national interest" would be required.

Ursula Bauer is one of 27,000 "cousins" and would-be heirs of eccentric Mrs. Garrett who have filed claims to her estate now worth more than $20,000,000.

Childless and so retiring that in the 35 years before her death she left her brownstone house only once, Mrs. Garrett died in comparative obscurity in 1930, leaving a will which gave a few friends and servants, only $62,250 of the fortune amassed by snuff manufacturer Walter Garrett.

Cousins sprang up all over the world. Claims were filed from 46 states and 29 foreign countries.

Approximately 19,000 claims have been disproved in this most complex estate litigation in American legal annals. Records are splotched with murder, scandal and fraud. A man in Germany slew his uncle and aunt in a quarrel over the wealth.

And still the court fight goes on, all because Mrs. Garrett did not follow the advice of her husband, who once wrote her concerning their wealth:

"Do not let the scalawags get any if you can help it. I trust you will oblige me by making a will at once. Do not put it off."

A 25-year-old Cleveland youth was finally subdued by other passengers as a flagman, his left leg ripped by a shot, jerked an emergency cord to stop the Pennsylvania Railroad flyer.

Mrs. Mary Refici, 29, of Cleveland, was reported in critical condition in Sewickley Valley Hospital with a .25 caliber bullet in her abdomen. Her husband, Sam was one of the men who helped overcome the assailant.

Police Sgt. Walter Rosiak identified the pistol-wielder as Kenneth Short, a Negro, and said he had been jailed on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Rosiak quoted the youth as saying:

"Take it easy with me. I have brothers and sisters and other relatives in Cleveland and they are going to suffer by me. I did no wrong."

Rosiak pieced together this version of the terrifying hour's ride.

G. E. Walker, 45, of Pittsburgh, said the youth sitting beside him had been drinking from time to time from a bottle filled with some dark liquid. Suddenly, he pulled a gun, rammed it into Walker's ribs, and began muttering threats.

Walker said he sat motionless for fully 45 minutes, along with other passengers. Then the youth suddenly whirled, leaned over the seat back of him and fired the gun. This was apparently the shot which struck Mrs. Refici.

Ike League Tells Clubs To Disband

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP)—Leaders of the National Draft Eisenhower League announced simultaneously today that all state units have been asked to disband and that the original six organizers of the league had pledged to support the candidacy of Harold E. Stassen.

A statement issued at the league's headquarters here by Stewart Scheftel, chairman, said:

"We have read and digested the full text of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's letter to Leonard V. Finder of New Hampshire. As a result, the National Draft Eisenhower League, Inc., reluctantly bows to the wishes of the general and has today asked all of its State chairmen to disband their organizations."

Ike N. H. Group Leaves Choice Up to Delegates

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 24 (INS)—A conference of members of the Draft Eisenhower League, sponsors of a full slate of candidates in New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primaries March 9, decided unanimously today to maintain the organization, but leave candidates in the field to be guided by their own judgment.

The conference decided:

"We could not continue as an organization to work for the election of pledged Eisenhower delegates at the primaries."

Rep. Joseph H. Geisel of Manchester, president of the league, said the action was taken in view of the statement made by Gen. Eisenhower that he could not accept nomination. He continued:

"The New Hampshire Eisenhower League will remain in being but will not at this time make any further organized and concerted effort in behalf of the General's nomination."

Let the People Decide, Sponsor Urges Ike

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 24 (AP)—The man to whom Gen. Eisenhower gave his presidential race "no" wrote the general today that "countless men throughout the land" believe he is "needed" in the White House.

Leonard V. Finder, publisher of the Manchester, N. H., Evening Leader, an early supporter of the "Draft Eisenhower" move, today put on page one an open letter to the general which declared:

"The popular preference is the one which should prevail."

Stork Beats Cab In Chelsea Race

The stork overtook a struggling cab today and relayed his burden to Mrs. Benjamin Zweigman, 34, Fourth st., Chelsea, while she was hurrying with her husband, Benjamin, to Chelsea Memorial Hospital, only half a mile away.

The baby boy, undaunted by the near-zero temperature despite his five-pounds-six-ounces announced his arrival just as the cab swered into Chelsea sq. with only the long hill of Bellingham st. ahead of it.

One hundred yards short of the hospital, Frank Burnham, Clark ave., Chelsea, halted his taxi to lend Zweigman a hand, but found the baby already born.

Burnham took off for the hospital and dashed back with student nurses Nan Hogaboom and Anna Phurston.

They did what they could to make mother and child comfortable while Burnham drove the rest of the way to the hospital.

24 Flee Flames, Frozen Hydrants Hamper Firemen

SOUTH BOSTON LAUNDRY PLANT AFIRE TODAY
Oil Overflow From Heater Said to Be Cause of Blaze

Frozen hydrants and subzero temperatures hampered firemen today as flames drove 24 persons to the street from a Peabody tenement, a South Boston laundry and a Roxbury apartment house.

Oil overflowing from a cellar heater with a broken pump caused a blaze in the Lucky Strike Laundry Co., East 2d st., South Boston, which spread to the first floor of the mangle room where nine women were working.

The women, an engineer, a handyman and the laundry owners, Thomas B. and William J. Whalen, brothers, Center st., Roxbury, made their way to safety through heavy smoke and steam escaping from boilers.

$25,000 PEABODY LOSS

Four fire companies were held up for almost 10 minutes until a frozen valve in the nearest hydrant was loosened.

Loss of $25,000 was caused in a three-story wooden building housing ground floor stores and a family of five when a fire was followed by a hot air blast in Andover st., Peabody.

Driven out in a temperature of 10 below zero were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Dzielnick and their three sons, Joseph, 26; John, 24, and Henry, 17. Mrs. Dzielnick, 55, suffered a heart attack during the flight and collapsed, but was revived in a neighbor's home.

Firemen, forced to stretch hoselines several hundred feet when two hydrants were found snow-covered and a third frozen, suffered frostbite during a three-hour battle.

TWO SISTERS INJURED

Two sisters received minor hand burns while trying to beat out flames in the kitchen of their third-floor apartment in Oakburn ave., Roxbury and were forced to flee. They were the Misses Ella, 36, and Ada Nichols, 38, both treated at City Hospital and released.

Four others forced to the street were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Johnson and Jessie and Louise Shaw.

FREED IN SLAYING — Mrs. Alice Drinkwater, of Columbia, Me., who was freed of manslaughter charge in Machias. She testified that she shot her husband after he threatened to kill her and her baby if she didn't shoot him. He had fatally wounded her step-father and daughter by a previous marriage.

Herald to Appeal Tobin Verdict

The Boston Herald today announced it would appeal to the Supreme Court a $1000 verdict granted James G. Tobin, brother of former-Gov. Maurice J. Tobin, in a suit brought on the basis of an article entitled "Clear it with Jimmy, or else."

The article was written by William E. Mullins, the newspaper's political writer.

A Suffolk County jury found in favor of the Herald in connection with two other Herald stories written by John O'Conor, State House reporter. Tobin had asked $100,000 damages.

Daughter of Amish Leader, Bound 10 Years, Found Insane

GOSHEN, Ind., Jan. 24 (AP)—A physicians' report that Lucy Hochstettler, 41, is insane was filed in Elkhart Circuit Court today as her brother, Elam, denied religious differences caused her to be held for year in chains. Their white-bearded, 75-year-old Amish father, Samuel Hochstettler, accused of keeping the woman bound to her bed for 10 years, will be taken to the state penal farm today to start serving a six-month term for assault and battery.

"The question of leaving the church was never brought up after Lucy accepted the Amish faith when she was 15 years old," her farmer-brother said today.

Elam said his father kept Lucy bound with ropes and chains only because she suffered occasional attacks of violent insanity.

When the white-haired Amish church elder was arrested Thursday, Sheriff Yoder said the daughter had been restrained for 20 years because she rebelled at joining the strict Amish sect when she became 21 years old.

The daughter was examined by two physicians appointed by Circuit Judge Simpson and by the family physician. Judge Simpson said no action will be taken on the sanity report before Monday.

Dr. H. E. Vander Bogart said they agreed Miss Hochstettler was insane and should be committed to an institution.

The physicians questioned her at the family home in the presence of about 15 relatives and neighbors, all Amish, Dr. Vander Bogart said.

The white-bearded Hochstettler admitted he had confined his daughter to her bed for seven years by rope and for the past three years by chains.

"A man in your position and of your intelligence should know better than to commit such an inhuman act," Judge Simpson said in imposing sentence.

Sheriff Luther Yoder said Hochstettler had restrained his daughter for 20 years because she "refused to become Amish" at the age of 21. The first 10 years she was locked in her room.

France Decides To Devalue Franc

PARIS, Jan. 24 (AP)—France has decided to devalue the franc even without the permission of the international monetary fund, a spokesman for the foreign ministry declared today.

The spokesman said there was no question of France withdrawing from the fund. France, he said, is obliged by her present financial position to create a devalued external franc and a free money market.

Government sources predicted earlier that the franc, now officially 120 to the dollar, would have two different official foreign exchange values. One would be established by trading on the Paris free money market, where the rate Friday was 340 to the dollar.

The other would be set by the government at between 220 and 250 to the dollar. Exporters trading dollars for francs at the government exchange office would get half their francs at one rate and half at the other, the sources added.

New Vandenberg Europe Aid Plan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—Sen. Vandenberg (R.) of Michigan, made public today a new plan for handling the multi-billion dollar European Recovery Program under a single administrator of cabinet status in a new agency virtually free of any State Department controls.

The plan was prepared by the Bookings Institution and Chairman Vandenberg asked members of his Foreign Relations Committee to give it careful study, referring to the proposal as a highly important service.

Kay Francis Gaining After Collapse

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 24 (AP)—Actress Kay Francis continued today to gain on an "upper respiratory infection" which forced her from the stage of the Hartman theater to an oxygen tent in White Cross Hospital. The 43-year-old star of stage and screen collapsed yesterday from what detectives said was an overdose of sleeping pills and under circumstances which led police to detain her stage manager for five hours while they investigated.

As the hullabaloo over her collapse subsided, Dr. Maurice B. Rosoff, her physician, said she was "seriously, but not critically ill."

The play "State of the Union," in which Miss Francis had been playing, went on last night with Erin O'Brien-Moore doing the honors after a hurried plane flight from Chicago.

Police released Miss Francis' stage manager, Howard Graham, 37, after she regained consciousness and confirmed his story of what happened to her.

Graham was taken into custody at White Cross Hospital when police found Miss Francis had received superficial burns on her legs—burns they later decided came from radiators in her hotel during a fainting spell.

A featured player in the cast reported argument was necessary to convince the stricken actress she must remain off the boards for an indefinite period.

A long-time friend, Mrs. Richard Barthelmess, wife of the former motion picture star, arrived in Columbus from New York by plane early today to be at Miss Francis' bedside.

Miss O'Brien-Moore was an instant success in last night's performance of a role the honey-voiced Miss Francis played since 1946. Miss O'Brien-Moore has been in a special company of "State of the Union" in Chicago.

The official police report of Miss Francis' collapse related the actress called Graham at 6:30 a. m. yesterday, saying she had taken some sleeping tablets. She fainted after Graham arrived at her hotel room. When he took her to the window for air, her legs were burned.

BRITISH COMPOSER IS IRKED ON ARRIVAL—Sir Thomas Beecham, British symphony conductor, and Lady Beecham arrive in New York aboard the Queen Elizabeth following a rough voyage. He was irked when told that 8-year-old Ferruccio Burco (at right) had arrived in the U. S. to conduct symphony orchestras. "Who is responsible for this outrage?" he stormed. Reds' World War III Criminal List Ready, U.S. Tops--Wiegand

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Dean of American Foreign Correspondents
Written Expressly for the Hearst Newspapers

CAIRO, Jan. 24—Soviet Russia has begun preparation of a list of "war criminals" who will be among those held responsible for World War III, if it comes and if they fall into Soviet hands by capture, surrender of forced delivery.

Americans are said to head that list.

British, Greeks, Turks, Italians, a number of French and lastly a few Germans in the western occupation zones are alleged to follow in that order.

The basis for the list allegedly is being laid in, and is growing out of, Moscow's campaign charging Americans and others with "war mongering" and with prompting war.

That is the information which has reached certain usually well-informed quarters in Rome.

HEADED BY 'TROIKA'

The information is said to come from sources in contact with the "Troika," that mysterious and little-known Soviet secret service organization which operates outside Russia in foreign countries. The "Troika" is reported to be independent of the NKVD, the former OGPU or Soviet Russian internal police.

On the American list of would-be "war criminals" are said to figure some statesmen, diplomats and politicians, several generals and particularly a number of newspaper publishers, editors, writers and columnists, and radio commentators.

The Nuernberg mass trials of top Nazis in which Soviet Russia participated, and their execution, together with the present Nuernberg trial of 21 Nazi diplomats before an American court, will, it is claimed, provide the legal basis and ample justification for whatever action Soviet authorities may take with those, military or civil, who fall into their hands in the event of war.

U. S. PENALIZED

Particularly drastic penalties will be meted out by the Soviets to those judged responsible for the "war crimes" of bombing open and undefended towns and cities, it is asserted.

It is further stated claims by any defendant Americans or others of actions taken on "instructions from their government" or claims "orders from superior officers" had to be carried out, will not be accepted.

Precedents for this, it is claimed, have been established by the Americans and British in their military trials of defeated Germans captured in Germany, Italy and China especialy by the Allied Tribunal at Nuernberg and now by the Americans in the trial of German statesmen and diplomats, also at Nuernberg, and by the several weeks trial of Japanese war criminals in Japan.

America, Britain and France, in their treatment of capitulated Germans, in effect, laid down the principle, the entire poulation of a defeated nation, from the babes in mothers' arms to octogenarians, are responsible for war, and defeat is a crime.

That lesson should not be lost on the American people as Soviet Russia begins the preparation of its list of "war criminals" in a possible World War III, who are judged and condemned in advance.

GI (Intoxicated), Tank (Sober), Raise Havoc in Oklahoma Town

LAWTON, Okla., Jan. 24 (AP)—An intoxicated Fort Sill soldier ran beserk in an Army tank here shortly before midnight—leading frantic MP's on a dizzy 12-mile chase through the heart of town before they trapped him with a road-block.

The one-man armored force crashed three cars on his stormy passage and started a near-panic in Lawton, a town of 20,000, where startled citizens jammed the police telephone board with queries and play-by-play reports.

The provost marshal's office at the fort acknowledged the incident, but withheld the man's name and announced tersely "an investigation is going on now."

Col. Andrew Pickard, night duty officer, added that a platoon of five Sherman medium tanks is stationed at the post—which is Army's top artillery school.

Desk Sgt. A. Hennessee of the Lawton police said his first report came from an excited man who burst into the police station shouting "an army tank just smashed my car!"

"I thought he'd flipped his lid," said Hennessee. "Then the phones started."

Hennessee followed the pursuit on his dispatcher's radio and gave this running account:

The soldier, a radio operator, drove the tank through a fort gate. Military police gave instant chase, but could do nothing to stop the huge machine as it thundered the five miles to Lawton. A Sherman weighs about 16 tons and is nearly 10 feet broad. Hennessee said military authorities told him the soldier had been drinking.

When the tank hit town it swung down a residential street and struck the cars, then it entered the business section, leaving scars on the pavement. By that time jeeps, command cars, Black Marias and police cruisers were in hot pursuit. Then the mechanized force turned back to the fort.

MP's in jeeps tried to stop it by driving ahead and slowing down—but thought better of it when the mechanical monster relentlessly bore down on them. Finally, back on the post, they rigged a fake road block of painters' scaffolding and bluffed the driver to a halt. Then they seized him.

Chicago Teachers Weigh Pay Strike

CHICAGO, Jan. 24 (AP)—Leaders of the AFL-Chicago Teachers' Union, claiming half of the city's 14,000 public school teachers, met today to decide whether its membership will strike if delayed pay checks are not received by Tuesday.

John Fewkes, president, said early returns on the union's vote indicated nine to one in favor of strike action.

The Men's Teachers' Club, with a membership of about 1000 voted to begin a sit-down strike Monday in the classrooms.

The checks were held up by the Board of Education when the city finance committee delayed action on approval of the record $96,972,000 school board tax levy for 1948.

4 N. H. Children Leap From Windows in Fire

low those registered in Monday's deep freeze.

The cold wave penetrated into the deep South, and temperatures of zero or slightly above were reported from Kentucky southward to Central Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia.

The nation's ice box was located at Land O'Lakes, Wisconsin, where a reading of —33 was chalked up. The previous day it was —45 in Minnesota.

Only Florida appeared to be staving off the cold snap. A warm air from over the Gulf of Mexico shielded the state from the invasion of Arctic air. Temperatures around 55 were reported in the northern part of the state, and Miami's thermometer stood at 73. The cold wave, however, may push downward into the state during the day.

State police in the areas near the Mason-Dixon line reported many hotels jammed with motorists, most of them bound south but some lingering in southern areas before pushing northward.

The cold wave is moving easterly and relief is due in the Midwest during today as the coastal states bear the brunt of the movement of Polar air from the frozen Canadian plains.

In contrast to today's weather, statisticians at the weather bureau said the coldest Jan. 24 on record was 13 below in 1882. However, in 1906 the mercury soared to 60.

U. S.-Born Pair Doomed by Slavs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (INS)—State Department officials said today the United States is investigating reports that American-born Mrs. Emma Dobeljak and her son, Stephen, 10, have been sentenced to death by Yugoslav courts.

Reports reaching the department said the two, together with Mrs. Dobeljak's daughter, Oliver, 8, were seized by Yugoslav authorities and imprisoned.

The girl who couldn't speak, much less sing, for months with a strange throat ailment, is to make her nation-wide radio debut Sunday at 11:30 p. m. (MBS).

Five years ago, scar tissue closed her throat and the girl breathed for a year through a tube. During a series of subsequent operations, she was unable to speak.

Finally, a Memphis, Tenn., physician inserted an artificial throat of vitallium metal and she recovered her voice.

Forrestal Backs UMT Plan To Show World U. S. Policy

Special to Boston Evening American

CHICAGO, Jan. 24—Universal military training would provide an invulnerable manifestation of this nation's policies to the whole world, Defense Sec. Forrestal contends. Indorsing, without qualification, military training for all, Forrestal said:

— Frank Walter—Copyright, 1948, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"Say, how'd you like me to take you out to a spaghetti dinner tonight?"

"It would make it crystal clear to the world that we are not unready."

In Chicago for an off-the-record address before the Commercial Club, the secretary asserted at a press conference:

"Universal Military Training would have a beneficial effect on our foreign policy and would back up all moves by State Sec. Marshall."

He said enlistments in the Marine Corps and Navy were meeting expectations but that the recruiting program of Army ground forces was lagging. He added:

"Universal Military Training needed to help solve this problem for our military ground forces.

"Regardless of what weapons we have, we must have troops to land on, to hold and to defend our positions.

He said Universal Training would supply personnel in technical fields, such as radio, radar and aviation, and would strengthen and maintain an ever-ready military force.

This country now has only two battleships in commission—one in the Atlantic and the other in the Pacific—due to a lack of personnel and funds, he revealed. There are others, however, in "mothballs," he added.

Sec. Forrestal said he was working for balanced military forces.

Asked if an excessive amount of military personnel was being used in government administration, he said it was difficult to get competent personnel due to low wages and added:

"A lopsided portion of military men in government would not be beneficial any more than an excessive number of teachers or lawyers. We must have a composite personnel in government."

Red Revolt

was arrested on orders from Moscow and interned until six months after the war.

"George was one of the Soviet army officers suspected of deviation from Moscow's doctrine. Many of these officers were 'liquidated' at the end of the war.

"The disappearance after the conflict of Russian generals and minor army officers who won fame in the war seems a certain indication that Moscow deemed the purge necessary, as many of these men had too much opportunity to observe conditions elsewhere that were better than in Russia.

"We have many reports of popular unrest throughout Russia."

Roughly defined, Chen's position is that of a sublimated political boss as director of the organization department of the central executive committee of the Kuomintang, dominant Chinese political party.

Some say that with the exception of Chiang Kai-shek, he is the most influential man in the Chinese government. He is roundly denounced by the Communists.

Chen, one of the deepest students of the modern world politics, said he is convinced that Red Fascism must eventually fail because, for instance, "Chinese Communists in the Northern civil war are forcing Chinese men to violate all filial piety by killing their own parents on pain of having their own wives and children slaughtered before their eyes."

PROTECTIVE DEVICE

He said enforcement of such senseless obedience as "discipline" will lead any who practice it to destruction.

Chen declared Fascism at first was a protective device against Communism and, as such, was entitled to exist, but that it began to lose this right at the instant Mussolini attacked Abyssinia, because thereupon it exceeded its proper bounds and became a brutal aggressor.

Hitler carried on Fascism's self-destruction to the finish, he said, and added:

"Thus Communism likewise is doomed because it has become an instrument of world aggression instead of a mere revolution against Czarist abuses.

"Communism first imposed itself on capitalism, then Fascism imposed itself on both Communism and capitalism, and now removal of Fascism by the late World War permits Communism to run wild.

"Another war seems to be the solution most commonly expected, but when one pursues such a line of thought the suffering of the various peoples thus affected should be taken into consideration.

"I consider the Ukrainian revolt the first hint of what may happen in the comparatively near future."

Borders Watched For Fleeing Reds

NEW YORK, Jan 24—Immigration authorities have been warned to watch the Canadian border in upstate New York for alien Communist party leaders who are fleeing the U. S. to escape deportation.

This was learned today as the Justice Dept. also warned its agents along the Mexican border and in various major ports to be on the alert for Red Fascists in the U. S. illegally.

Immigration authorities estimate there may be 5000 alien Communists now carrying on Stalins work in New York City and it is known that a series of arrests within the next few weeks will include prominent CIO and AFL labor leaders who hold major offices in key unions throughout the city; a number of top-ranking Communist party leaders; and Communist international agents whose names are never mentioned in official Red publications.

Big Chief Rain Man Takes No Chances

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24 (AP)—An Indian rain-maker who screamed at his gods to deposit a little moisture on drought-plagued Southern California made sure of results.

Chief Tuxhai of the Wasco tribe brought along from Portland's Chamber of Commerce a gallon jug of Oregon's finest rainwater to suffice, he said, in case his deities didn't hear his appeals. If they didn't they were stone deaf.

Tuxhai hopped off a plane and, before cameramen could even get set, shouted "Let's have some rain, hey boys?" Then he let go horrendous yells in native dialect, meantime beating the daylights out of a tom-tom.

Said Tuxhai, American name Cliff Meecham, World War 2 Marine and highway engineer: "In the past he has proven very efficacious in similar circumstances."

Meteorologist Leo Sergius, going along with the gag by posing in a raincoat, carrying an umbrella, checked his instruments, said laconically: "Forecast, continued dry."

Long Rent Control Proposed by CIO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—The CIO today proposed a 29-month extension of rent controls and the wiping out of all 15 per-cent "voluntary" increases made under the present law.

Donald Montgomery, chief of the Washington office of the CIO auto workers, presented the program in a statement prepared for a Senate Banking subcommittee.

The present federal rent control act expires Feb. 29.

The AFL on Friday presented its program for extending rent controls.

Reds Not to Visit DP Camps in U. S. Zone

FRANKFURT, Germany, Jan. 24 (AP)—Eleven Russian correspondents touring the U. S. zone of Germany will not be permitted to visit displaced persons camps. "Their visit might cause trouble," a U. S. Army spokesman said today.

Most of the 300,000 displaced persons in the American zone "are still here because they don't like Russian Communism," explained Col. George S. Eyster. They have refused repeated chances to return to their homes in Russia or other Communist dominated countries, he said.

Spencer Tracy, Lana Turner Grand in 'Cass Timberlane'

By PEGGY DOYLE

Sinclair Lewis couldn't have asked for a handsomer translation of his best-selling novel than MGM has given "Cass Timberlane" with the co-operation, of course, of co-stars Spencer Tracy and Lana Turner, scripter Donald Ogden Stewart and director George Sidney.

His love story of the 41-year-old small town judge who falls in love with and marries a young girl of commonplace background, their break when she is defeated by the country club's social uppities and intrigued by a wolfish bachelor who intends to remain that way is well-told if overlong.

Tracy, as the judge whose integrity and honesty cannot be corrupted even by those who call themselves friends, turns in an outstanding characterization. Miss Turner, who frankly doesn't look too young for Spencer (it must be the strenuous frontpage life she leads) surprises by coming up with a portrayal that reveals Ginny Marshland's emotional and social insecurity and her subsequent coming-of-age through a tragic trial-and-error experience.

Margaret Lindsay, as the girl who hoped to marry the widower-judge, has a winning directness and honesty. Zachary Scott's chaser is so obvious you wonder smart Ginny fell like a ton of bricks.

Others who turn in the story's country-club set are Mary Astor, Albert Dekker, John Litel and Selena Royle.

Frankly, from me to you, "Cass Timberlane" isn't my dish of tea. It is very difficult for me to believe that the judge, a very hep character, would put up with the c. e. s. phonies or, for that matter, their stuffy brawls which take up much too much celluloid during these penny-pinching days for Metro.

But don't get me wrong . . . Tracy and Turner are boxoffice and "Cass Timberlane" is what "the girls" of all ages, their eyes adrip, eat up on the screen.

VERA RALSTON is said to have her first real chance at a straight dramatic role, that of a woman dominated by one man who finds herself in love with another, in "The Flame," opening Thursday at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters. Robert Page is shown with her.

'Secret Beyond the Door' Due at RKO Next Thursday

"Secret Beyond the Door," powerful psychological drama teaming Joan Bennett with English actor Michael Redgrave in his American film debut, is due on the RKO Boston screen next Thursday.

Artie Dann, one of vaudeville's first comedians, will head the companionate stage show. Others are to be the Lone Brothers, outstanding acrobatic novelty act, and Gautier's Dogs, novelty animal act.

Produced and directed by Fritz Lang, "Secret Beyond the Door" is reported to be a journey into unexplored regions of the human mind. Redgrave, one of the British screen's top ten stars, is cast as the architectural editor who collects rooms in which murders have been committed for a hobby, adds them as wings to his ancestral mansion. There he brings Miss Bennett as the bride he wooed and won in a whirlwind courtship in Old Mexico locale of the opening sequences.

A series of ugly incidents shadow the honeymoon-nest. The bride learns that the man she has so recently married is a dangerous schizophrenic, that he is under the dominance of an older sister, that he is suspect in the death of his first wife, that he has a secretary who was planning to marry him and an adolescent son he has neglected to mention.

FORE-WARNED---BUT NOT FORE-ARMED

IN THE STARK DRAWING on this page, our artist symbolizes for MEMBERS OF CONGRESS today the possible penalties of military unpreparedness—or the wrong kind of preparedness—in what the scientists tell us is the dawn of the atomic age in warfare as well as in peace.

Livy's History of Rome recounts the episode of a barbaric army which fought its way into the city.

The rude soldiers came at last to the Capitol, where they found the august Senators calmly awaiting them, each unarmed man in his seat of honor, and were so over-awed by the majestic spectacle that they turned meekly about and marched away.

But the barbarians of this modern world are less civilized and less merciful than were the untutored Gauls.

LET US HOPE THAT OUR WORTHY CONGRESSMEN, IN BOTH THE SENATE AND THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, ARE ABLE TO DISCERN THE MEANING OF THE SPECTRAL SCENE DEPICTED ON THIS PAGE.

Some of them may believe, as they are wont to assert, that A SKELETAL DEFENSE is sufficient to keep invading enemies away from our country.

And in the last war we fought mainly on hostile territory and in neutral seas after a treacherous attack had been made upon us.

But let us be mindful that the next such attack will come without warning, as did the wanton assault on Pearl Harbor, and will be far more lethal.

REMEMBERING THIS, if charred Hiroshima and scores of ruined cities in Europe mean anything at all, it is that a SKELETAL DEFENSE may very well make SKELETONS of millions of our people.

Washington itself, because it is the national capital, would be one of the first places to be hit by bombing planes descending upon us across the Arctic.

In such a catastrophe there would be no legislative immunities.

A SKELETON CONGRESS might be one of the relics—and a grisly one, since the bones of dead men cannot rectify the errors that are made in the flesh.

SURELY THE EIGHTIETH CONGRESS, WHICH IS NOW IN SESSION, DOES NOT WANT TO DOOM THE EIGHTY-FIRST CONGRESS TO BE OUR LAST CONGRESS.

For that is the almost certain event if the next war, which is shaping itself even now in the demoralized world, finds America unprepared—or inadequately prepared.

To be prepared we need those things that have been recommended by our experts—an adequate Navy always in trim, an Army that is always accoutred, an Air Force of invincible size and speed range, a competent Merchant Marine, and—indispensable to them all—a CITIZEN RESERVE well organized under a system of UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING.

CONGRESS HAS before it legislation to establish military training.

IT ALSO HAS, IN THE LONG-TESTED SWISS PLAN, THE PROPER PATTERN TO WHICH THE PENDING LEGISLATION CAN BE READILY SHAPED.

This is not a militaristic nation, and it must not become that.

Europe's war-breeding regimes of conscription are not for us.

But neither is this a weak or a poor nation, and it must not incur the fatal risk of being unguarded.

Together with the armed forces which are the vanguard of our defenses, A FREE CITIZENRY trained for PATRIOTIC SERVICE will give us PEACE and SECURITY.

Nothing else can do so.

COMMON SENSE

SENATOR RICHARD H. LEE of Newton has asked the Massachusetts Legislature to end the obviously unjust practice of obliging motorists with excellent safety records to pay as much for compulsory insurance as motorists with histories of carelessness and recklessness.

The Senator, voicing the sentiments of thousands of people, has suggested the insurance applicants be divided into three classifications, with the safe drivers getting the lowest rates and the habitually unsafe ones the highest.

As every member of the Legislature must agree, this is only simple common sense.

The person who knows that he will be penalized for negligence is bound to take his responsibilities as a driver more seriously and he will have a new incentive for respecting and obeying the laws of the road.

Furthermore, the motorist will find pride and pleasure in receiving a place in the low-rate classification, for it will be something that he will have earned.

Senator Lee has rendered an important service to all safe drivers in the Commonwealth, and he deserves the full support and backing of legislators who believe in fair play.

Unencumbered lassies young and fair
From Bethnal Green to Belgrave Square
With cheeks high flushed
And hearts loud beating
Await the tender annual greeting
The loveliest lass of all is mine
Good-morrow to my valentine.
—MACAULAY

ABOVE QUOTED as a reminder to male subscribers to send the ladies in their lives a Valentine. It is remembering little things like that which greatly please the ladies and inspire their affections to rise to new heights. Or so say our Horses & Women experts.

WHEN IDENTICAL male twins reach manhood and marry one is invariably childless. So stated the British man of science Prof. Lockhart-Mummery. Commenting on this I said I would check and perhaps win a stogie from the good professor. Subsequently a number of subscribers named "identical" male twins they knew who were fathers. However, I have yet to win the stogie. There are two types of twins, identical and similar. Identical twins are from a single reproductive unit, similar twins from separate units. This is also true of egg laying animals, identical twins are from one egg, similar twins from two eggs. In the case of human beings it takes an expert to determine whether twins are identical or similar. Very few twins know in which classification they belong. The use of the word "identical" has no connection with appearance. The world's greatest twin expert is possibly Prof. Lancelot Hogben of Birmingham University, England. To determine whether male twins who are proud papas are really identical I will have to get a decision by such an expert as Prof. Hogben before I can definitely say Prof. Lockhart-Mummery is in error. This is certainly trying to win a stogie the hard way.

CHICAGO HUSBANDS: The standing of those allegedly "wonderful" Chicago husbands has suffered a severe setback. Am in receipt from all over the country of clippings of a news photo showing a Chicago husband on his knees outside of a court room begging his wife to drop divorce proceedings. On these clippings scornful wives of other sections have written a variety of highly sarcastic remarks. As for example, a Detroit matron commenses: "What a disgusting exhibition of humility? This Chicago husband is the perfect mouse. Give me a Detroit husband. I'd rather have a man sock me on the jaw any time than get down on his knees to beg my forgiveness."

"Never put all your eggs in one basket, I always say—so I always deposit half here and half in your downtown branch!"

WEDDING PRESENT: The Duke and Duchess of Windsor sent no wedding present to Princess Elizabeth. So I note it reported. It is probably true the princess received no present marked as coming from both the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. But I understand the Duke, individually, sent the princess a wedding present. Some sort of a desk I believe.

Duchess of Windsor

ASKING: Queries from clients. Q. So you never saw a stage or screen portrayal of Cleopatra that impressed you. How about Joan Of Arc? A. I like Ingrid Bergman's portrayal of Joan very much. Q. Why no Sir George Bernard Shaw? What's the reason for this brilliant old boy not having been knighted. A. Shaw has been offered many honors but refuses them. He prefers to be known as Mr. Bernard Shaw.

WIFE TRAINING: Am asked what I think of boys being taught cookery and housekeeping in certain high schools. It's a good idea. Later in life this will help them in their wife training. Having a complete knowledge of cooking and housekeeping these lads, on becoming husbands will be able to check intelligently on the little lady's home managing ability. This will spur her to greater efforts. Most domestic arguments arising from husbandly criticism of the cookery or home managing of a wife is resented because the husband usually doesn't know what he is talking about.

YOUNG OLD TIMER: Ever hear of a 78-year-old man launching a new business project? Well, that's what that lively young old timer, 78-year-old Mike Benedum of Pittsburgh is doing. Just starting a new oil project in Gulf of Mexico. Mike is 78, looks 55 and feels like a man of 40. Says he is never going to retire.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24—Everything good is happening to Dennis Day—pardon me, Mr. Eugene Patrick McNulty. He's found himself a beautiful bride-to-be, Peggy Almquist, whom he'll marry Jan. 29—and he's found himself a marvelous job in the movies.

Dennis, one of the finest imitators I know as well as having a God-given voice, will be the star attraction in "Babes in Toyland," the old musical comedy, when it's brought to the screen by Boris Morros and William Le Baron.

I hate to tell you how many years ago I saw it in Chicago, but I can truthfully say I wasn't very old—I was in my teens, but I have never forgotten it. I loved it.

Now, about Dennis, I've wondered why we haven't heard his singing voice on the screen. Few sing better. As for talent as an actor, he has plenty.

ALL OF US, who were so shocked at the first news that Kay Francis was at death's door, were relieved when later reports came that it was an overdose of sleeping pills and not an attempted murder.

Mrs. Richard Barthelmess, her oldest and best friend, barred no one from New York.

Erin O'Brien Moore, who replaces Kay for the rest of the run of "State of the Union," did one of the nicest things I've ever known an actress to do. She is taking only the equity minimum and letting Kay get the rest of the salary.

Bretaigne Windust, Bette Davis' director, who is a very good friend of Howard Graham's, who was at first jailed, said that it was incredible that Graham should be accused of trying to murder Kay. He says that Hugo, as they call him, is one of the nicest young men he has ever known.

JIM McGINNIS, at Metro, who was on the Morning Telegraph when I was and knows the story of Jeanne Eagels, would like to make it as his first producing picture.

Of course Casey Robinson who is at Warners, owns the rights. Casey is calling his story "The Rain Girl." I am sure Jim knows the story of Reynold Wolf's mad infatuation for the Eagels girl. Reynold was the first of the Broadway columnists and he was crazy about Jeanne, who was so fragile and lovely.

In the beginning he was greatly responsible for her success, for he wrote about her constantly. But after she had made her success she had other ideas.

I SHOULDN'T be surprised if all the legal talent in America sues Harry Kurnitz when a murder mystery he has just written called "Let's Kill All the Lawyers" is brought to the screen.

How come Kurnitz, who penned the swashbuckling "Don Juan," does murder mysteries? Well, Harry, under the name of Marco Page, wrote dozens of pot boilers before he was in the money.

May be better not to kill all the legal lights. Harry may need a lawyer himself after this one is filmed.

JUST HEARD a very heart-warming story about Sol Lesser, who still has to take it easy following his heart attack, although he's much better.

Sol heard that a 10-year-old Milwaukee boy named Tommy Kosiesko, who is bedridden as result of an auto accident, had written asking for an autographed picture of Johnny Weissmuller.

When Sol heard that the boy has to lie flat on his back for eight months, he not only sent the autographed picture of Weissmuller, but the latest Tarzan film, "Tarzan and the Mermaid." He reduced it to 16 mm. so Tommy could see it on the ceiling.

I call that a nice man.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: Tyrone Power and Linda Christian are in exactly the same boat as Lana Turner and Bob Topping. There isn't a night spot or cafe they can walk into without being the cynosure of all eyes and the center of attraction.

Linda Christian

Tyrone has solved the problem by staying out of cafes and having "The Casserole" caterers bring in chicken dinners to him and the girl friend at home. Lana and Bob tried to slip into the Fox and Hounds for a quiet meal, but there was such a commotion the management had to put them back in a far corner where they couldn't be seen.

Being in the headlines has its drawbacks.

Naturally the name Bromfield, I can only mean Louis, the novelist, so when I asked if Jean Bromfield, who has just been signed by Hal Wallis is any relation to Louis, I was told he is a cousin.

Chet Allen goes into "Sorry, Wrong Number" with Burt Lancaster and Hal Wallis has him under long term contract. Formerly a golden gloves boxer and football player at St. Mary's University, he's on the Clark Gable circuit and that isn't bad.

Hal, who discovered Burt Lancaster, believes he has another bet in the Bromfield boy.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN is calling the new baby Prudence Ann, and she's getting a lot of opposition. Her oldest son, Michael, telephoned her at the hospital and said, "We in the nursery don't like the name Prudence." Also Maureen's Irish compatriots want Brideet.

I was thinking how many baby girls have been born in Hollywood in the past few weeks. Deborah Kerr, the Van Johnsons, the Ray Kroncs, Dinah Shore and Maureen and Johnny Farrow's babies were boomers. Is it because it's leap year? I won't know. When the new crop of boy babies, they say it means war.

"Pagan Love Song," Mike Curtiz tells me, will be his big picture of the next year. It is to be a history of California and will celebrate the centennial of our wonderful state.

The character of Sen. George Hearst, father of William Randolph Hearst and one of the great American pioneers in California, will figure in the story.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: Charles Boyer has been very sick with bursitis, which is an inflammation of the nerves and joints and is very painful.

Gregory Peck and his Greta leave for Nassau on Feb. 12 on the first vacation Greg has had since he became a top star.

Marjorie Weaver is back in Hollywood and will have her baby in June. I wish Marjorie would come back to the screen. She's such a pretty girl and talented.

Marjorie Weaver

Mark Stevens is out of "Street With No Name" for a few days with an infected foot. He is taking penicillin.

Well, Tom Drake and Beverly Tyler, who fell and haven't been seeing each other for six months, were back together at the Somerset House.

Now I've had a cablegram from "Mad Magician" Dietz, who is in town to put a touch on "Mr. Joseph Young of Africa" has just completed a course in Parliament at the University of Georgia. He says he'll decide when he finishes the movie.

Atwater Kent Hodgwood's most famous party given for a cocktail soiree yesterday for Patrice Munsel, the opera singer, and the assembled and social world was out to meet her.

Le Pavillon and Cira's both chose the same opening night and there was much dining and dancing at both places.

Ann Rutherford was with Michael Jackson and a party at Le Pavillon. Marjorie Donlevy walked in with Tom Cassara, who is very handsome. They stayed only briefly.

Some by-play went on with Diana Lynn, who came with Bob Neal, and over in a corner was her former boy friend Fred Clark, with a girl who looked enough like Diana to be her twin.

Bob Taylor, who always has good taste in the girls he takes out, was with Karen Booth, a lovely.

Anne Baxter was with John Hodiak and her father and mother.

That's all today. See you Monday.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

DR. NATHAN SCHACHNER has written, for the current issue of the American Jewish Year Book, a learned and interesting article entitled, "Church, State and Education," which shows what the law has been and is now concerning religion in the schools of the various parts of the United States. While his summary of the history of this subject is of no value, what he misses altogether is that atheism may be taught our children, but not the word of God, not the Bible, not the Psalms, not the prophets, not the Apostles. Karl Marx is legal in the schools, but not Isaiah or St. Mark. They suffer from biblical affiliation.

For many, this is a very serious question. They say that religion has no place in the schools. But has anti-religion a place? The real difficulty is that the Catholics object to the St James version of the Bible; the Protestants object to the Douay version, and the Jews object to both. But does anyone contend that a basic, holistic interpretation of man's place in society does not come completely and naturally from the Bible? Is it the enlightened and moral attitude or a matter of superstition and social consciousness?

Last week, in the City of the church of Christ was mother's to do with the fundamental question, what is it being done to oppose and counteract them corruption of manners who are atheistic and who propagandize an atheistic conception of morals in public schools?

DR. SCHACHNER'S ARTICLE does not deal with this at all. Unfortunately, most of those who discuss this question are too concerned with money for bus rides and too little with the need for God.

The real danger is not that the public schools will become sectarian, but that fastidious parents will not send their children to public school. An increasingly large number do send their children to private and parochial schools. The independent (private) schools are not only for the rich and fashionable, but for children whose parents object to a materialistic, amoral education. They want their children to learn not only about the amoeba but also about the Beatitudes. It is a question of moral standards.

Unfortunately, while the attack is being made on religion—every kind of religion—with increasing force, the children of God are divided into quarreling, bickering sects who hate each other, denounce each

"Haven't we anything but these flimsy hand towels? I can't get the soap out of my eyes!"

". . . This is my commandment: That ye love one another as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends . . ."

And also he said:

"Ye have heard that it hath been said: 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy.' But I say unto you: 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you . . .'

BUT FEW OF THOSE, Christians some of them call themselves, pay heed to this counsel. They fret and fume over [illegible] and who shall get them out of the taxpayer's money, but they do not worry about the poison that is daily [illegible] the minds of [illegible] children [illegible] [illegible] parochial schools. [illegible] the dehumanization of man [illegible] and pagan hate [illegible] knows no better [illegible] the rule of reason [illegible] conscience, the passion for [illegible] and justice.

This is not a problem for lawyers and doctors of philosophy. It is the obligation of every parent to protect his own child, to guard it, to nurture its soul, to watch its body, to make it as strong mentally as physically. That obligation can be passed on to no one—surely not to the state. To the state, the child, as the person, is a statistical entity to be counted; to the parent, the child is the fulfillment of man's destiny as a moral being.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—Welcome to our Great Snow-White Way! The weather may be frigid, but you'll find our hospitality extra-warm these days. For now the bloom is off the boom, competition once again is the life of trade, and the customer's always right and welcome.

Today, Stranger, I'm going to take you and your appetite on a tour of Gotham's restaurants.

IF YOU FAVOR foreign food, just name it and you can have it for a price, of course. Italian? Try the Scaloppine a L'Epicure at Barbetta's, or the Gnocchi alla Romano at Giovanni's, or spaghetti and red wine at Lenoci's with its fabulous cellar.

At Danny's Hideaway, a dinner of antipasto, steak, onion bread and green salad is fit for a king, and don't overlook the ravioli and spumoni when you're watching the celebs at El Morocco.

At the Colony, where the French cuisine is as hoity-toity as the customers, how about trying the Delices de Poularde Gismonda? It's so yummy, it's even worth the trouble of pronouncing it. And some time, for dessert, order Par Sicilienne; if you've never tried one, you can't possibly have any idea of what's in store for you in heaven.

Honore's La Coquille, over on E. 52d st., serves Frogs' Legs Provencale, removed from the royal family of frogdom. Theodore's offers a wonderful French version of Brazilian chicken, and A La Fourchette makes magnificent Moules Marinere. (Those are marinated mussels to you, pal—but who cares what they're called when they taste thataway?)

The chef at Coq Rouge knows what he's doing when he whips up Vichyssoise, and the most heavenly Filet of Sole Bonne Femme in the entire world is to be found at Le Pavillon.

WHAT'S THAT, Stranger? You've got a yen for cooking with gas, American style? Right this way to the Fireside Inn, where good chickens go to get fried.

The Fireside specializes in Fried Chicken, Southern Style, but the batter in which each bird is tenderly dipped before sizzling is a top secret recipe—so secret they had to hire the chef to get the recipe!

Luchow's, the famous old dining place on E. 14th st., has another dish as American as the coonskin cap days of "The Deerslayer"—venison! And Marnel's on E. 47th st. tops even that. They serve buffalo and elk steak.

Want to know where they serve a Chicken in Every Pot that's a delicious reality rather than a run-of-the-mill Election Year Campaign Promise? That would be Monte's-on-the-Park, which looks out on the ice-covered lake in Central Park. It's not just an unadorned fowl they dish up, either — whole roast chickens are stuffed with wild rice and toasted almonds and served en casserole.

LOBSTER THERMIDOR is dreamy at the Chateau Richelieu, another place with a fine collection of wines.

At the Versailles, where they stay open until four, they don't mind if you get hungry at all hours! They have a famous chef, La Grange, and his onion soup and hamburgers are on a par with his wonderful chicken specialties.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, SAT., JAN. 24, 1948

FOR A PAL

By DAMON RUNYON

A Romance of The Curious and Most Exciting Thoroughfare Known as Broadway

FOR A MATTER of maybe fifteen years or more, Little Yid and Blind Benny are pals, and this is considered a very good thing for Benny because he is as blind as a bat, and maybe blinder, while Yid can see as good as any body and sometimes better.

So Little Yid does the seeing for Benny, explaining in his own way to Benny just what he sees such as a horse race or a baseball game or a prize fight or a play or a moving picture or anything else for Yid and Blind Benny are great hands for going around and about wherever anything is coming off, no matter what, and up to the time this old Mary Marble comes into their lives they are as happy as two pups in a basket.

How Benny comes to go round I do not know, and nobody else along Broadway seems to know either, and at first nobody cares, although I once heard Regret the horse player, say it is probably in sympathy with the judges at the race track, Regret being such a guy as claims all these judges are very blind indeed. But of course Regret is sore at all race-track judges because they always call the wrong horse for first in the close finishes.

LITTLE YID tells me that Blind Benny is once a stick man in a gambling joint in Denver and a very good stick man at that and one night a fire comes off in a flop house on Larimer Street, and Blind Benny, who is not blind at the time runs into the fire to haul out an old guy who has more coin on him than somewhat, and as a result of flames burns Benny's eyes so bad it leaves him sightless.

Well, this may be the true story of how Benny comes to go blind but I know Little Yid likes Benny so much that he is not going to put Benny the worst of any story he tells about him and for anybody knows maybe Benny is by reason of the fire to search the old guy. Personally, I do not believe in taking too much stock in any story you hear on Broadway about anything. But there is no doubt about Blind Benny being blind. His eyelids are tacked down tight over his eyes, and there is no chance that he is faking, because many guys keep close tab on him for years and never catch him peeping once. Furthermore, several guys send Benny to eye specialists at different times to see if they can do anything about his eyes, and all these specialists say he is one of the blindest guys they ever examine. Regret says maybe it is a good thing at that, because Benny is so smart as a blind guy that the chances are if he can see he will be too smart to live.

He is especially smart when it comes to playing such games as pinochle. In fact, Benny is about as good a single-handed pinochle player as there is in this town, and there are many first-rate pinochle players in this town, if anybody asks you.

BENNY punches little holes in the cards so he can tell which is which by feeling of them, and the only way anybody can beat him is to cheat him, and it is considered most discourteous to cheat a blind guy, especially as Benny is always apt to catch a guy at cheating and put up an awful beef.

He is a tall, skinny guy with a thin face, and is by no means bad-looking, while Little Yid is about knee high to a snake, and they look like a father and his little boy as they go along the street with Little Yid hanging onto Blind Benny's arm and giving him the right steer.

Of course it is by no means an uncommon thing on Broadway for citizens to come upon blind guys waiting at a corner for traffic to stop, and for the citizens to steer these blind guys across the street, although if the blind guys have any sense they will keep their dukes on their tin cups while they are being steered, but it is a most unusual proposition in this town for anybody to go steering a blind guy around for fifteen years the way Little Yid steers Blind Benny, as Blind Benny is a guy who takes plenty of steering.

IN FACT, one time Yid has to be away on business for a week, and he leaves Blind Benny with a committee of guys, and every day one of these guys has to steer Benny around wherever he wishes to go, which is wherever there is anything going on, and Benny wears the whole committee plumb out before Yid gets back, as Benny is certainly a guy who likes to go around and about. Furthermore, he is so unhappy while Yid is away that he becomes a very great nuisance, because it seems that none of the committee can see things as good as Yid for him, or explain them so he can understand them.

Personally, I will not care to have Little Yid do my seeing for me, even if I am blind, because I listen to him telling what he sees to Blind Benny many times, and it seems to me Little Yid is often somewhat cockeyed in his explanations.

Furthermore, I will hate to be explaining things to Blind Benny, because he is always arguing about what is taking place, and giving you his opinions of it, even though he cannot see. In fact, although he cannot see a lick, Blind Benny is freer with his opinions than guys who can see from here to Europe.

IT IS a very interesting sight to watch Little Yid and Blind Benny at the race track, for they are both great hands for playing the horses and, in fact, Benny is a better handicapper than a lot of guys who have two good eyes and a pair of spectacles to do their handicapping with.

At night they get the form sheet and sit up in their room with Yid reading off the past performances and the time trials, and all this and that, and with Blind Benny doping the horses from what Yid reads, and picking the ones he figures ought win the next day.

THEY always have a big argument over each horse, and Yid will tell Blind Benny he is daffy to pick whatever horse it is he picks, and Benny will tell Yid he is out of his mind to think anything else can beat this horse and they will holler and yell at each other for hours.

But they always wind up very friendly, and they always play the horse Benny picks, for Yid has more confidence in Benny's judgment though he hollers and yells at him more than somewhat when one of his picks loses. They sit up in the grandstand during every race and Yid will explain to Benny what is doing in the race, and generally he manages to mention that the horse they are betting on is right up there and going easy, even though it may be lagging back of the nine ball for Yid believes in making Blind Benny feel good at all times.

But when a horse they are betting on is really in the running, especially in the stretch, Yid starts to root him home, and Benny roots right along with him as if he can hear and rocks back and forth in his seat and pounds with his cane and yells, "Come on with him, jock" the same as anybody with two good eyes.

I AM telling you all this about Little Yid and Benny to show you how they are very close friends, indeed. They live together and eat together and argue together, and nobody ever hears of a nicer friendship on Broadway, although naturally some citizens figure for a while that one of the other must have some angle, but this friendship is of such peculiar uncanny for a friendship to last those years on Broadway.

Blind Benny has some kind of income from his people out West who are sorry about him being blind, Little Yid has a piece of a small cigar store run by a couple of his brothers over in Hoboken when they are not in caps such as some citizens wear on their heads, and it seems this fact does very well, and the brothers are willing to send Little Yid his piece without him being around the facety very much, as they do not seem to consider him any boost to a cigar store.

SO YID and Blind Benny have always the money to go along, what with making a little scratch now and then on the races, and they never seem to care for any company but their own and are very happy and contented with each other. In all the years they are together, Yid is never known to more than say hello to a doll, and of course Blind Benny cannot see a doll anyway, which many citizens claim is a great break for Benny, so Yid and Benny are carrying no weight this respect.

Now one night it seems that Abe Jacobs, the ticket spec, has a pair of Chinee duckets to the opening of a new play by the name of Red Hot Love, a Chinee ducket being a complimentary ducket that is punched full of holes like Chinee money, and which you do not have to pay for, and Ike gives these duckets to Little Yid and Blind Benny, which is considered very large-hearted of Ike, at that.

So when the curtain goes up on Red Hot Love, Yid and Benny are squatted right down in front among many well-known citizens who are all dressed up in evening clothes, because this Red Hot Love has a bunch of sell actors in it, and is expected to be first-class.

NATURALLY, when the play begins, Yid has to give Blind Benny a little information about what is doing, otherwise Benny cannot appreciate the thing. So Yid starts off in a whisper, but any time Yid starts explaining anything to Benny he always winds up getting excited, and talking so loud you can hear him down at the Battery.

Of course Blind Benny can follow a play as good as anybody if there is plenty of gab on the stage, but he likes to know what actors are doing the gabbing, and what they look like, and what the scenery looks like, and other details that he cannot see, and Little Yid is telling him in such a voice as causes some of the citizens around to say shush-shush. But Little Yid and Blind Benny are accustomed to being shushed in theaters, so they do not pay much attention.

Well, Red Hot Love is one of these problem plays, and neither Little Yid or Blind Benny can make much of it, although they are no worse off than anybody around them, at that. But Little Yid tries to explain to Blind Benny what it is all about, and Benny speaks out loud as follows:

"IT SOUNDS to me like a rotten play."

"Well," Little Yid says, "maybe the play is not so rotten but the acting is."

There is much shushing from one and all around them, and the actors are giving them the bad eye from the stage because the actors can hear what they say, and are very indignant, especially over this crack about the acting.

Well, the next thing anybody knows down the aisle come a couple of big guys who put the arm on Little Yid and Blind Benny and give them the old heave-o out of the joint, as you are not supposed to speak out loud in a theater about any bad acting that is going on there, no matter how bad it is.

Anyway, as Little Yid and Blind Benny are being prodded up the aisle by the big guys, Blind Benny states as follows:

"I still claim that it sounds like a rotten play."

"Well," Little Yid says, "the acting certainly is."

THERE is much applause as Yid and Benny are getting the heave-o, and many citizens claim it is because the customers are glad to see them heaved, but afterward it comes out that what many of the customers are really applauding is the statements by Little Yid and Benny.

Well, Yid and Benny do not mind getting the heave-o so much, as they are heaved out of many better theaters than this in their time, but they are very indignant when the box office refuses to give them back the admission price, although of course their duckets do not cost them anything in the first place and they are a little out of line in trying to collect.

THEY are standing on the sidewalk saying what an outrage it is when all of a sudden out of the theater pops this doll by the name of Mary Marble, and her face is very red, and she is also very indignant, because it seems that in the second act of the play there are some very coarse cracks let out on the stage, and it seems that Mary Marble is such a doll as believes that cracks of this nature are only fit for married people to hear, and she is by no means married.

Of course Little Yid and Blind Benny do not know at the time that she is Mary Marble, and in fact they do not know her from Adam's off ox as she marches up to them and speaks as follows:

"Gentlemen," she says, "I wish to compliment you on your judgment of the affair inside. I hear what you say as you are getting ejected," she says, "and I wish to state that you are both right. It is a rotten play, and the acting is rotten."

NOW off this meeting, what happens but Mary Marble gets to going around with Little Yid and Blind Benny whenever she can spare time from her job which is managing a little joint on Broadway where they sell stockings such as dolls wear on their legs, except in summertime, although even when they wear these stockings you cannot tell if a doll has anything on her legs unless you pinch them, the stockings that dolls wear nowadays being very thin, indeed.

Furthermore, whenever she is with them, it is now Mary Marble who does most of the explaining to Blind Benny of what is going on, because Mary Marble is such a doll as is just naturally bound to do all the explaining necessary when she is around.

When it comes to looks, Mary Marble is practically no dice. In fact, if she is not the homeliest doll on Broadway, I will guarantee she is no worse than a dead heat with the homeliest. She has a large beezer and large feet, and her shape is nothing whatever to speak of, and Regret, the horse player, says they never need to be afraid of entering Mary Marble in a claiming race at any price. But of course Regret is such a guy as will not give you a counterfeit dime for any doll no matter what she looks like.

MARY MARBLE is maybe 25 years old—although Regret says he will lay six to five against her being any better than twenty-eight—and about all she has running for her, any way you take her, is a voice that is soft and gentle and very nice, indeed, except that she is fond of using it more than somewhat.

She comes from a little town over in Pennsylvania, and is pretty well educated, and there is no doubt whatever that she is unusually respectable, because such a looking doll as Mary Marble has no excuse for being anything but respectable on Broadway. In fact, Mary Marble is so respectable that many citizens figure there must be an angle, but it is agreed by one and all that she is perfectly safe with Little Yid and Blind Benny, no matter what.

AND now at night instead of always doping the horses, Little Yid and Blind Benny will often sit up in their room talking about nothing much but Mary Marble, and Benny asks Yid a million questions over and over again.

"Tell me, Yid," Blind Benny will say, "what does Mary look like?"

"She is beautiful," Yid always says.

Well, of course, this is practically perjury, and many citizens figure that Yid tells Blind Benny this very large lie because he has an idea Benny wishes to hear only the very best about Mary Marble, although it comes out afterwards that Little Yid thinks Mary Marble is beautiful, at that.

"She is like an angel," he says.

"Yes, yes," Blind Benny says, "tell me more."

AND Little Yid keeps on telling him, and if Mary Marble is only one-eighth as good-looking as Yid tells Ziegfeld and George White and Earl Carroll will be breaking each other's legs trying to get to her first.

"Well," Blind Benny often says, after Little Yid gets through telling him about Mary Marble, "she is just as I picture her to myself, Yid" he says. "I never care so much about not being able to see until now and even now all I wish to see is Mary."

The idea seems to be that Blind Benny is in love with Mary Marble, and the way Little Yid is always boosting her it is no wonder. In fact, the chances are a lot of other citizens will be in love with Mary Marble if they listen to Yid telling Blind Benny about her, and never get a gander at her personally.

But Blind Benny does not mention right out that he is in love with Mary Marble, and it may be that he does not really know what is eating him, which is often the case with guys who are in love. All Blind Benny knows is that he likes to be with Mary Marble and to listen to her explaining things to him, and, what is more, Mary Marble seems to like to be with Blind Benny, and to explain things to him, although as far as this goes Mary Marble is such a doll as likes to be explaining things to anybody any time she gets a chance.

NOW Little Yid and Blind Benny are still an entry at all times even when Mary Marble is with them, but many citizens see that Little Yid is getting all sorrowed up, and they figure it is because he frets Blind Benny is gradually drifting away from him after all these years, and everybody sympathizes with Little Yid no little and there is some talk of getting him another Blind Guy to steer around in case Blind Benny finally leaves him for good.

Then it comes on a Sunday night when Little Yid says he must go over to Hoboken to see his brothers about the cap business and as Mary Marble has to work in the stocking joint on Saturday nights Little Yid asks Blind Benny to go with him.

Of course Blind Benny does not care anything about the cap business, but Little Yid explains to him that he knows a Dutchman's in Hoboken where there is some very nice real beer, and it there is one thing Blind Benny likes more than somewhat it is nice real beer, especially as it seems that since they became acquainted with Mary Marble he seldom gets nice real beer as Mary Marble is a terrible knocker of just such matters as nice real beer.

SO THEY start out for Hoboken, and Little Yid sees his brothers about the cap business, and then he takes Blind Benny to a Dutchman's to get the nice real beer, only it turns out that the beer is not real, and by no means nice, being all needled up with zolky, and full of headaches and one thing and another. But of course Little Yid and Blind Benny are not going around complaining about beer even if it is needled, after all, needled beer is better than no beer whatever.

They sit around the Dutchman's quite a while, although it turns out that the Dutchman is nothing but a Polack, and then they rub a late ferryboat for home, as Little Yid says he wishes to ride on a ferryboat to get the breeze. As far as Blind Benny is concerned, he does not care

As they are being prodded up the aisle by the big guys, Blind Benny states as follows: "I still claim that it sounds like a rotten play."

Of course Blind Benny cannot continue walking after he hits the water, so he sinks at once.

how they go as long as he can get back to New York to meet up with Mary Marble when she is [illegible]

There are many reasons Understand with them, because [illegible] and at such an early age [illegible] In fact, [illegible] for a few [illegible] on the [illegible] and Little Yid and Blind Benny, and these persons [illegible] all dozing on the benches and smoking [illegible] their legs stuck out in front of them.

Now if you know anything about a ferryboat you know that they always have big gates across each end of same to keep [illegible] and trucks and [illegible] and one thing and another from going overboard into the water when the ferryboat is moving back and forth, as naturally it is the case in regard to ferryboats running between Hoboken and New York, and [illegible] up the stream.

Well, Little Yid is away out on the end of the ferryboat up against the gate enjoying the breeze and Blind Benny is leaning against the [illegible] the smoking room door where Little Yid plants him when they get on the boat, and Blind Benny is smoking a big cigar that he got at the Doughboy Canteen before the parting of Mary Marble, when all of a sudden Little Yid yells like this:

"OH, BENNY," he yells [illegible]

Naturally, being taxi drivers in the direction of the river and Little Yid's voice comes from the starboard, and Blind Benny keeps following his nozzle in the direction of the voice, expecting to feel Little Yid's hand stopping him any minute, and the next thing he knows he is walking right off the ferry boat into the river.

Of course Blind Benny cannot continue walking after he hits the water, so he sinks at once, making a sound like glug-glug as he goes down. It is in the fall of the year and the water is by no means [illegible] so Benny comes up for air [illegible] and naturally lets out a loud sprawk and this time the ferryboat is quite some jumps away [illegible] and nobody seems to see him or can hear him.

NOW Blind Benny cannot swim a lick, so he sinks again with a glug-glug. He comes up once more and this time he does not sprawk or holler, but he says out, very clearly, as follows: "Good-by, Pal Yid."

All of a sudden there is quite a splash at the water near the ferryboat and Little Yid is swimming for Blind Benny so fast the [illegible] he will make a sucker bet Abe Weiss-muller if Johnny Weissmuller is around although he is not [illegible] around for going swimming without provocation.

It has to dive for Blind Benny, for by this time Blind Benny is going down for the third time, and everybody knows that a guy is only allowed three downs when he is drowning. In fact, Blind Benny is about down where the crabs live before Little Yid can get a hold on his collar.

At first Little Yid's idea is to take Blind Benny by the hair, but he remembers in time that Benny does not have much hair, so he [illegible] on the collar.

And being a little guy, Yid has quite a job getting Benny to the top and keeping him there. By this time the ferryboat is almost at its dock on the New York side, and nobody on board seems to realize that it is shy a couple of passengers, although of course the ferryboat company is not going to worry about that as it collects the fares in advance.

BUT it is a pretty lucky break for Little Yid and Blind Benny that a tugboat happens along and picks them up, or Yid may be swimming around the North River to this day with Blind Benny by the nape of the neck going glug-glug.

The captain of the tugboat is a kind old guy with whiskers by the name of Deusenberg, and he is very sorry indeed to see them in such a situation, so after he hauls them on board the tugboat, and spreads them out on bunks to let them dry, he throws a couple of slugs of gin into Little Yid and Blind Benny, it being gin of such a nature that they are half sorry they do not go ahead and drown but really must up with it.

THEN the captain unloads them at Forty-second street on the New York side, and by this time between the water and the gin Blind Benny is very much fagged out, indeed, and in bad shape generally, so Little Yid puts him in a cab and takes him to a hospital.

Well, for several days Blind Benny is no better than even money to get well, because after they get the water out of him they still have to contend with the gin, and Mary Marble is around carrying on quite some, and saying she does not see how Little Yid can be so careless as to let Benny walk off the end of a ferryboat when there are gates to prevent such a thing, or how he can let Benny drink tugboat gin, and many citizens do not see either, especially about the gin.

AS FOR Little Yid, he is looking very sad, and is at the hospital at all times and, finally, one day when Blind Benny is feeling all right again, Little Yid sits down beside his bed and speaks to him as follows:

"Benny," Little Yid says, "I will now make a confession to you, and I will then go away somewhere and knock myself off. Benny," he says, "I let you fall into the river on purpose. In fact," Little Yid says, "I unhooked the gate across the passageway and called you, figuring you will follow the sound of my voice and walk on off the boat into the water.

"I am very sorry about this," Little Yid says, "but, Benny," he says, "I love Mary Marble more than somewhat, although I never before mentioned this to a soul. Not even to Mary Marble, because," Little Yid says, "I know she loves you as you love her. I love her," Little Yid says "from the night we first met, and this love winds up by making me a little daffy.

"I get to thinking," Little Yid says, "that with you out of the way Mary Marble will turn to me and love me instead. But," he says, starting to shed large tears, "when I hear your voice from the water saying 'Good-by, Pal Yid,' my heart begins to break, and I must jump in after you. So now you know, and I will go away and shoot myself through the head if I can find somebody to lend me a Roscoe, because I am no good."

"Why," Blind Benny says, "Pal Yid, what you tell me about leading me into the river is no news to me. In fact," he says, "I knew it the minute I hit the water because, although I am blind, I see many things as I am going down, and see very plain that you must do this thing on purpose, because I know you are close enough around to grab me if you wish.

"I know, of course," Blind Benny says, "that there is bound to be a gate across the end of the boat because I often feel it before, and in fact I remember hearing them fix this gate when we are leaving Hoboken. So," he says, "I see that you must unhook this gate. I see that for some reason you wish to knock me off, although I do not see the reason, and the chances are I will never see it unless you tell me now, so I do not put up more of a holler and maybe attract the attention of the other guys on the boat. I am willing to let it all go as it lays."

"MY GOODNESS," Little Yid says, "this is most surprising to me, indeed. In fact," he says, "I scarcely know what to say, Benny. In fact," he says, "I cannot figure out why you are willing to go without putting up a very large beef."

"Well, Pal Yid," Benny says, reaching out and taking Little Yid by the hand, "I am so fond of you that I figure if my being dead is going to do you any good, I am willing to die, even though I do not know why. Although," Benny says, "it seems to me you can think up a nicer way of scragging me than by drowning, because you know I loathe and despise water. Now then," he says, "as for Mary Marble, if you—"

BUT Little Yid never lets Blind Benny finish this, because he cuts in and speaks as follows:

"Benny," he says, "if you are willing to die for me, I can certainly afford to give up a doll for you, especially," he says, "as my people tell me only yesterday that if I marry anybody who is not of my religion, which is slightly Jewish, they will chop me off at the pants pocket. You take Mary Marble," he says, "and I will stake you to my blessing, and maybe a wedding present."

So the upshot of the whole business is Mary Marble is now Mrs. Blind Benny, and Blind Benny seems to be very happy, indeed, although some citizens claim the explanations he gets nowadays of whatever is going on are much shorter than when he is with Little Yid, while Little Yid is over in Hoboken in the cap racket with his brothers, and he never sees Blind Benny any more, as Mary Marble still holds the gin against him.

PERSONALLY, I always consider Little Yid's conduct in this matter very self-sacrificing, and furthermore I consider him a very great hero for rescuing Blind Benny from the river, and I am saying as much only the other day to Regret, the horse player.

"Yes," Regret says, "it sounds very self-sacrificing, indeed, and maybe Little Yid is a hero, at that, but," Regret says, "many citizens are criticizing him no little for sawing off such a crow as Mary Marble on a poor blind guy."

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE, Beauty and Fashion Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—Being lithe and cheerful about heftiness is nothing more than a defense mechanism . . . a cover-up mental thought to soften the blow of what the mirror reveals . . . if the overweight is only to much of you for no good or medical reason.

The "dolly with the hole in her stocking" may still be a dolly . . . But the gal with the pants, the paunch and a dipping derrier and hallway "bosom" is no gravy for any man's wish . . . Even though she may have a bigger mind and be wittier at a tea or upstairs at a parties or double-talk.

YOUR COMMANDMENTS

This is the doll-era in clothes . . . It is time when the free woman returns to make feminine beauty and fascination on purpose. Helplessness and calculated study. And frumpy dumpiness is not in the fashion book of gals. So here we go, reducers, with 10 commandments. Mental twisters to keep a woman on the steely uphill climb to the goal of silhouette sylph attractiveness.

RULE 1—Thou shalt not wait in trepidation and fear and emotional servitude against the desire to win . . . the weight you want and should have.

RULE 2—Thou shalt not skip breakfast. Nibble at luncheon and eat lightly at dinner . . . But eat three well-balanced "eating" meals a day. And no between-meal calories.

RULE 3—Thou shalt not snack at night when lights are turned down low and you're ready to sleep. A stomach empty at bedtime induces slumber-time while you're sumbering.

RULE 4—Thou shalt not eat fast. Haste makes plenty of waist-line. A hurried swallow is an invitation to more food.

NO ALCOHOL, REMEMBER!

RULE 5—Thou shalt not drink! Alcohol at no time during the reducing period . . . And plenty of water only between meals . . . And we do mean plenty of aqua pura.

RULE 6—Thou shalt not make sunshine with the sugar pot, but with the sun-sprinkler, unless you spare them both.

RULE 7—Thou shalt not weaken your will power or end your enthusiasm for dieting by keeping late hours. You must get hours or more of sleep to perpetuate the pep and vitalize the vetoes.

RULE 8—Thou shalt not eat the fatting trimmings of meat, even though they are tasty bits to the touchy in the system.

RULE 9—Thou shalt not eat fatty, concentrated sweets and starches if you want to get slim. Train the temper to take it easy with these weight-wishers.

DESIGN FOR LIVING

RULE 10—Thou shalt not omit fruits from your diet. Decayed teeth and bones lie in the wake of a serious lack of Vitamin C in the body.

These are such difficult reminders to remember and to follow . . . through! Maybe you can't change the shape of your features . . . but you can change the shape of your body outline . . . cut its measurements, slim it to a body finesse that guarantees better physical looks and better health.

As there must be a design for living . . . there must be design for eating. And haven't you been eating well?

In tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser, we'll outline the menus for the 21st day (nearing the end, eh what). All the menus for the third week will be reprinted in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser.

TAKE A TIP from the glamor-gals . . . the modeling lovelies of the fashion runways and the cover-girls of the magazines . . . and use your eyes for more than seeing. To bring out the glory of your face . . . make eye care and makeup a necessary part of your daily beauty routine. And include the brows . . . which like your hands, are the expression medium of the orbs below them. Now that the pencil-line thin brow is out of the beauty picture . . . cultivate the natural brown line and . . . as the model illustrates . . . use an eye-pencil, either black or brown, to intensify their depth of color.

This Girl of 15 Should Let Romance Wait

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I'm a girl of 15. There are two boys whom I'm very fond of. One claims he loves me, yet when I'm not with him, he tells the same thing to another girl. The second boy really loves me, and I know for a fact that he doesn't cheat. I love him, too, but when I see the one who does cheat on me, I love him also.

They are both swell kids, good-looking and clean-cut. My girl friends keep telling me that the first boy is just giving me a line, but I don't believe them. What do you think? I'll do whatever you say.

"CONFUSED."

Dear "Confused":

What I think is that you are being very silly. It's silly, in the first place, for a girl your age to be talking about "love," and it's silly, in the second place, not to recognize a "line" when you hear one, and it's silly, in the third place to tell me a boy "cheats" and then, in the next breath, to call him a "swell kid."

You tell me you'll do whatever I say, but I doubt if you will. Because what I say is for you to stop talking and thinking about love and cheating, and get a little sense into your head. Put your mind on your friends, and your school studies and activities, and your hobbies and other interests, and let romance alone until you are older and wiser.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There is a young lady in my neighborhood whose parents know mine well, but our parents do not visit each other at their homes.

Would it be considered proper for these parents to visit each other—one extending the invitation first and inviting the young lady along?

"A. R."

DEAR "A. R.":

Let's see if I have this straight. What I gather from your letter is that you would like to have your parents invite the parents of this young lady to come to your home and bring their daughter with them, so that you would have an opportunity to meet her.

Certainly this would be quite proper, and a perfectly natural thing for them to do, since the two sets of parents are already acquainted. It would also be very smart to make the young lady's acquaintance under such approved auspices. Good luck to you!

SHE SHOULD WAIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 22 and very much in love with a fellow 29, with whom I have gone for several months. A few weeks ago he moved away and promised faithfully to write to me. He hasn't written yet. Have I given him enough time to write? Or do you think he is trying to tell me, in a nice way, that he isn't interested any longer?

"COFFEE."

Dear "Coffee":

I don't think I would be in a hurry to assume that your friend has lost interest in you so quickly. When a person moves to a new place, there are always a great many things to do and adjustments to be made, so that it is apt to be quite a while before one is ready to settle down and resume all normal activities.

I would think it quite likely that you would hear from this boy before long, but, if not, you will have to be philosophical and understand that a new environment and new friends may sometimes supplant old ones.

MANNERS AT HOME—Many young people who are courteous and patient with "outsiders" are entirely different at home! The girl who raises her voice at her brother, the young man who is easily annoyed by anything his sisters say, etc., should remember that good manners rightly begin at home. One can't (successfully) have two sets of manners—good manners for outside use and careless manners toward one's family.

The Correct Thing

By ELINOR AMES

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"U-M-M! Something smells too good to resist."

The Chef laughed. He opened the oven door, pulled out the rack, and there they were, an array of golden sweet potatoes; and wrapped around each one, a slice of sizzling brown bacon.

"And look at this," he went on. "Corn muffins, southern style, as you like them, not sweet. And—but this I cannot bring out—you will have to take a peek. Here is the kitchen flashlight. What do you see?"

"A big deep custard pie for dessert, my favorite!"

The Chef smiled. "Ah, naturally, because everything here is according to your own menu, and your suggestions for making good use of the oven. And, incidentally, a very good way to make a half pound of bacon into a substantial dinner dish."

AN AMERICAN FAVORITE

Bacon is an American favorite but it is too expensive to serve as often as most families would like. A half-lb. package contains about 10 slices, that is 2½ slices per person for a family of four. In this dinner the bacon is combined with inexpensive sweet potatoes to make an appetizing main dish. The nutritive balance of the meal is provided by the nutmeg custard pie, which is really a meat alternate because of the eggs and milk used in making it.

The amount of money we pay for bacon is not its real cost. We must remember that the part of the bacon we eat is often not more than half of the original weight, because the rest cooks out in the form of fat. So when buying bacon we must plan to use both bacon meat and the fat in dishes such as the baconized sweet potatoes in this menu; or we must fry or broil the bacon so slowly that the fat will not burn, and may be used later for seasoning, frying or shortening

MONDAY DINNER

Winter Vegetable Chowder
Cheese Croutons
Baconized Sweet Potatoes
Corn Muffins
Butter or Margarine
Hot Slaw
Nutmeg Custard Pie
Coffee or Tea Milk (Children)

All measurements are level.
Recipes serve four.

WINTER VEGETABLE CHOWDER

Into a heavy 2-qt. kettle measure 1 tsp. sugar and melt till dark brown. Add 3 tbsp. bacon fat, savory drippings or margarine, and ½ c. fine-diced carrots, ½ c. chopped onion, 1 c. diced celery, 1 c. shredded string beans, ¾ c. fine-diced turnip, and 1 c. fine-shredded cabbage. Fry and stir till slightly browned. Add 1 pt. tomato juice, 3 c. cold water, 1 small tart apple peeled and chopped, 1½ tsp. salt, 1½ tsp. sugar and a few grains pepper or a trace of cayenne pepper. Cover closely and simmer 1 hr. Serve in deep soup plates or shallow bowls; garnish with cheese croutons.

BACONIZED SWEET POTATOES

Allow 2 medium-sized sweet potatoes per person. Remove any imperfections. Scrub and steam-boil or pressure cook till tender. Peel and place in a medium-sized shallow baking dish which has been slightly oiled. Around each potato wrap 1 slice lean bacon cut thin. Bake in a medium-hot oven until the bacon is crisp and the potatoes are slightly browned, about 30 min. Serve in the baking dish.

HOT SLAW

Fine-shred enough white cabbage to make 6 c. Steam-boil in 1 c. salted water for 5 min., stirring twice for even cooking. Drain thoroughly. Add ⅓ c. cooked salad dressing, homemade or purchased, together with table mustard to taste. Heat in a double boiler.

NUTMEG CUSTARD PIE

Prepare homemade or packaged piecrust. Roll to ⅛ in. thickness and line a deep 9-in. pie plate. Fit the crust in loosely, do not stretch it. Bring it down over the edge of the plate, cut off the ragged edges with scissors and press into position with the tines of a fork. Brush all over with a very little unbeaten egg white, and place in a hot oven, 400 F., for 5 min. to partly cook the crust, and so prevent the filling from soaking in. Meantime prepare the custard filling.

To do this, beat together 3 eggs, ¼ c. sugar, ¼ tsp. salt and ½ tsp. nutmeg. Add 2 c. cold whole or reconstituted skim milk. Pour into the half baked crust. Return to the oven, cook 5 min. longer at 400 F., then reduce the heat to 350 F. and continue to bake about 35 min., or until the filling is light brown on top and a knife, when inserted in the center, comes out clean. Cool, and serve the day the pie is baked.

TRICK OF THE CHEF

To give special flavor to hot slaw, add a little celery seed.

Hostess' Favorite Recipe

By MARTHA LEE

MRS. MICHAEL T. KELLEHER of Jamaica Plain, wife of the head of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, gives us Curry of Lobster as her favorite dish, which she serves often for a buffet supper. When it is to be a main dinner dish, she uses as accompaniments a clear soup, French fried potatoes and peas, a tossed green salad, and an especially nice dessert made with peaches, macaroon crumbs and whipped cream.

CURRY OF LOBSTER

Sauce:

1 good-sized onion
2 stalks celery
1 small carrot
1 tbsp. strong curry powder, or more if a weaker variety is used
½ cup bread flour
2 tsp. salt
3 ounces butter
2 small fresh tomatos
1 tbsp. shredded cocoanut
1 good-sized apple
2½ qts. chicken or beef stock
¼ pint light cream

Dice the onion, celery, carrot, tomatoes and apples, and place in frying pan with the shredded cocoanut and butter. Fry slowly for about 10 min. until the moisture has evaporated from the ingredients. Add the curry powder and stir for 1 min. over slow fire. Add the flour and continue stirring for an additional 5 or 6 min. Season with salt and add the chicken or beef stock which has been previously heated very hot. Stir well and boil slowly for ¾ hour. Remove and strain, adding cream if to be used as a dressing as for chicken, or omit if for a stew.

To Prepare Lobster:

Use 2½ lbs. lobster meat; season to taste with salt. Fry in ¼ lb. sweet butter until the moisture has evaporated from the lobster meat. Sprinkle ½ tsp. dry curry powder over lobster meat, stir and fry for an additional minute. Pour a desired quantity of the curry sauce over lobster and boil very slowly for 5 minutes. This recipe makes 2 quarts, and serves 10 people.

FASHION this spring recognizes that woman is no longer a creature who merely postures and poses . . . but one who leads an active life, whose clothes must conform with her freedom. At least, that's the reflected keynote in the Monte-Sano collection which, for the first time in a long time, introduces silk coats as beautiful and wearable coat dresses. They are made in satin, faille and a new silk and worsted fabric. Such a silhouette . . . striking in its versatility . . . is a glistening black satin coat (top) that also can be worn as a dress. Well-balanced, the fullness of the skirt sweeps out from under the peplum effect at the waist. Spinning skirts for soft-looking suits are another Monte-Sano inspiration. The navy and white check suit (bottom) . . . bound in navy on the collar and the peplum-like folds of the short jacket . . . has a full pressed pleated skirt and follows a completely soft and rounded line with subtle movement.*

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: When a hostess is also cook and waitress at her dinners for six or eight guests, should the men guests stand when she rises to go into the kitchen to make ready the foods to be served? And should any of the women guests follow her into the kitchen in order to help her?

READER.

No . . . to both questions! Only the woman who is cook-waitress-hostess knows how confusing it is to have guests attempt to help her. What she appreciates most is for the guests to remain seated and carry on the conversation, paying as little attention as possible to her as she goes about her service-procedures.

GIFT TO ORGANIST

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

At a wedding, when there is to be both an organist and a soloist, is it customary to pay them or to give them each a present?

BRIDE-TO-BE.

If the organist and the soloist are friends of yours who volunteer their services, you should send each a present, with a warm-hearted note of appreciation to them for their goodness to you. But if . . . as is usually the case . . . they are professionals, they should be given their regular fees. (If you do not know what their regular fees are, you should find out, either from them or from the minister or the sexton. There should be no casualness about these obligations!)

Kindness in This

Attention, boy or girl, man or woman . . . show that you have a heart by giving your seat, in bus, street car or train, to anyone who obviously needs it more than you do. To a woman carrying a child, to an elderly person, to an infirm or crippled person, or to any person who looks "weary and heavy-laden."

Six Star Finale; Gil Sets Sights On K. C. Record

By AUSTEN LAKE

TONIGHT AT 10 O'CLOCK six lean youths in ribbon-trimmed track scanties will line up on the race-rim at the Boston Garden and start clawing taw with their spikes. In the center of the oval a man in formal wedding attire will chant, loud and clear, "Th' Jawn Dee Oh' Reileee myuul" his voice carrying to the farthest recesses of the building. Thirteen thousand people will stretch their necks as another gent in evening-wear fires a snub nosed pistol and six ankle jockeys start their 11-lap journey.

Possibly four minutes and eight seconds later, when the feature event of the evening is over, the fastest mile in Kay-Cee games history will be made, eclipsing the 4:9.1 standard which Gil Dodds set at the games last winter.

The six, bringing together a grotesque assortment of thick-and-thin shins, boney cavities and muscular bulges, are the best milers in the land—Gil (Ole Piston Legs) Dodds, Cy (Cherokee) Perkins; Bill (Piano Wire) Hulse; Larry (Unknown) Ellie; Tom (Herring Bones) Quinn and Bill (Pace Forcer) Mack. Each in his various time, has equalled or bettered 4:12 for the distance which, considering that Joie Ray's world record in 1919 was 4:14 indicates the caliber of today's youth.

A Harvard Prof Predicted It

SINCE RAY, THE MILE RECORD has been whittled down many times—Ladoumegue's 4:09, Jack Lockwood's 4:07.6, Gundar Hagg's 4:05.3 and 4:01.4 (1945). And now I find myself digging from my files a yellowing treatise entitled, "The Approximate Law of Fatigue and Speeds," written by the late Prof. A. B. Kennelly of Harvard's School of Engineering, written a dozen years ago when 4:07.6 was tops for the mile. The professor said then that a 4 minute mile was within reach of human legs and proved it with mathmatical charts and formulas.

And he had told me, "If we could breed humans like horses for selectivity and speed, I could predict when that four minute mile would happen." And the mouse-gray little man, who had never had any first hand experience with athletics during his own youth, but made a hobby of studying records in track, rowing, swimming, etc. to the point where the times line intersects the distance line, pointed to his chart.

"See that median," he said, tracing a hair line running between the little dots that represented records, spotted neatly for time and distance. "Those are man's approximate limitations according to what he has done. It shows that Man has reached his physical limit in distance from 100 to 440 yards, but in the longer races he will steadily improve. It shows that four minutes is Man's probable limit for the mile, maybe twenty years hence."

Well, it seemed a novel prediction, but one which, as the years rolled, proved unerring. Especially since track coaches around Boston are still divided into two poles of thought, the ones who are satisfied to win and the ones who go after time records. "Steve," the little Harvard prof had said, "proves that Man burns up energy nine times faster when he sprints than when he runs at a steady gate. Suppose we take two runners of equal ability. Let one get out from the gun and sprint a spell. I'll back the man who travels the even pace over the full distance. He'll win every time."

Need Mechanical Rabbit

THAT IS GIL DODD'S battle plan, to set a steady gait from beginning to end with scarcely any kick in the final stretch and to let with it, energies expended. The perfect theory, of course, is to run four 1-second quarters—the 4-minute mile. But man, at best, is an imperfect machine and so his efforts are variable. Many racers have tried to run with a stop watch in one hand, but even then it doesn't quite work. So it was the old Professor's idea to install a mechanical pace setter, similar in principle to the dummy bunny of electric lure, now used by the cream of the tracks as a decoy for the snake-hipped animals.

Of course my understanding is that the greyhound is a beast of low intelligence and often a little dotty from the hard routine of his life, while the college man is too shrewd on the average to go slugging after what he can easily recognize as a snare and a delusion. But I suppose I will be hearing from George Eustis and the hound people about this. The hound men are very sensitive about aspersions against the smartness of their pencil bellied pooches just as the midget motor racers have been writing in snarls about what I said concerning their sapadillio safaris, and the Harvard's have screeched insults with grammatical niceties about my writings on their football. There is no pleasing anybody these days, even when you praise them. Because I got a lot of partial yells from his racial brethren when I complimented Jackie Robinson last summer. Well that is all right too, because people cannot go around being glad all the time and goodness knows what with the many frets and worries waiting to entrap one between dawn and dark, it is a strain to be glad at any time unless you are a natural Pollyanna

Where am I now? I am sitting in my cubicle writing scattered thoughts about the K-C mile which is one of the very few times you will have to see Gil Dodds churn around a board track with his pounding stride which confounds the rules of graceful symmetry or poetry of motion. Because Gil literally looks, when he runs, as though he was chased by the devil, whatever way it is in his allegorical sermons. I think it must be the latter, because Gil is not the man, either spiritually or physically, to let Old Nick beat him to the tape and I'll bet if the Old Boy ran a 4-minute mile Gil would shave the mark some seconds finer. He has that kind of determination, and, to coin a phrase, he runs to beat the devil!

KC Meet Loaded With Stars But Dodds Holds Spotlight

By FRED HOEY

Though worrisome Gil Dodds will be the cynosure of attention in the John D. O'Reilly mile feature of the K. of C. track and field meet at the Garden tonight, he will not completely overshadow the sparkling short pants luminaries who will usher in the local 1948 indoor season.

Such attractive names as Forest Efaw, Harrison Dillard, Joe Nowicki, Tarver Perkins, Browning Ross, George Guida, Billy Mack, and the perenial favorites Joe McCluskey and Dave Albriton—the latter two have been in competition for nigh onto a combined aggregate of 29 years will be in for their share of headlines.

Despite the threats on meet and track records, it is Olympic year and that overshadows all else. With that fact most prominent in the minds of those 13,909 lucky enough to hold ducats for the S. R. O. presentation, Dodds will be the Olympic White Hope.

Dodds, an adopted Bostonian, and a most proper one at that, has been readily accepted by locals despite the fact he lacks a broad A or a geneology that antedates even the first Kay-Cee meeting. It will be he who will draw the applause, for he is considered as Boston's best bet in the forthcoming Olympics.

But it will not be a one man show not with the likes of Tarver Perkins, a full-blooded Cherokee, who races under the spangles of the Illinois Athletic Club Browning Ross, a chunky little miler who has to take three strides for every one of his opponent's, Bill Hulse the national outdoor record holder (4:06) and Tommy Quinn, attempting to equal the pace Dodds will set. From conjection of this class he may be forced to better his own 11-lap mark of 4:06.4.

Probably the most spectacular event of the 23-event bill will be the Prout 600 with George Guida, Charlie Slade, Reggie Pearman, Royce Crimmins and Ed Palmieri.

The Rev. Philip Coyle has 1000-yard run, which will be run in two heats to accommodate the large number of entrants, the competition will be nearly as stiff, but the division may slightly lower the caliber.

In the first heart will be Nowicki, Barten, Connolly, Thigpen and Saunders, while Carl Joyce, former Commerce High star who broke a record every time he ran last year as a schoolboy, headlines the cast in Part II. Sickinger, Sonnebon, Atkinson, Knowles, and Marron will supply the competition.

Nipped by only a half step in last night's Philadelphia Inquirer meet by Harrison Dillard, holder of all the National A. A. U. titles, Eddie Dugger will be striving to equalize the score in the high hurdle test, the first event on the program. Dugger is the former Tufts timber topper now running under the colors of the Dayton Athletic Club. Dillard, the outstanding hurdler in the nation, whistled over the 50-yard course in 6.4 seconds last night and that time is indictative of what to expect this evening.

Dugger, a popular athlete hereabouts, will be set for an upset. He has not won in Boston since the B. A. A. meet in 1943.

CHORUS BOY ATHLETE—John Schmidt, former Ohio State pole vaulter, sang as a hobby and pole vaulted 14 feet for a new national collegiate record. After giving up athletics as a hobby to become a member of the chorus of "Brigadoon," he felt the lure of the Olympics and is now making a comeback. Photo at right shows him in his costume for his musical role.

Karver Looks Ahead to Dodds

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 11 (AP)—Gerry Karver, king of the outdoor milers, is ready to meet Gil Dodds, best of the indoor performers, but he realizes he must travel faster than he did in winning the Inquirer Mile.

The 25-year-old Penn State senior reeled off the mile in 4:16.3 last night on a 12-lap track to turn back all of the top milers except Dodds, but he was disappointed in his time.

"I'm a little disappointed," he said. "I had hoped to run 4:10 or under. However, I felt that I had a lot left at the end. I am looking forward to racing Dodds, but I'll have to do better than I did last night to stay with him."

The paths of Karver and Dodds will cross in the Wanamaker Mile at the Millrose Games in Madison Square Garden Jan. 31.

The Penn State runner came from off the pace to win by two yards from Browning Ross of Villanova, whose 4:13.7 clocking in the Washington Star meet is the fastest time of the year. Favored Les MacMitchell, seeking his third straight success in the Inquirer Mile, let loose with a terrific last lap kick from far back but had to be content with third place, a yard back of Ross.

MacMitchell declared he waited "a little bit too long" but "I had plenty left."

He was one of the two remaining members of racing's "old guard" of famous trainers. The other is Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, just beginning his 25th year with the Belair Stud Stable of William Woodward.

Pasquel Denies Peace With Major Leaguers

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (INS)—The New York Daily Mirror quoted Jorge Pasquel, former president of the Mexican League, today as saying that Mexico's war with baseball in the U. S. was "still on."

Pasquel arrived in Newark early this morning by plane from Mexico City, accompanied by Miguel Aleman, Jr., son of the president of Mexico.

The Mirror said that when Pasquel was asked about a report emanating from Mexico City on Thursday that hinted strongly of a "peaceful settlement," the Mexican millionaire maintained that he wasn't interested in any peace offers.

(Walter Mulbry, Commissioner Chandler's assistant was reported on Thursday to have reached a "truce" with the Mexican baseball magnates. The report also stated that players who left their clubs to play ball south of the border would be reinstated in the United States.)

According to the Mirror, Pasquel stated:

"I have known (Commissioner) Chandler for a long time and I refuse to be bothered with any peace offers. Mexico is a free country—just like the U. S.—and we'll do as we please."

The Mirror said that Pasquel appeared very "disinterested" in the whole affair. He was reported to have said that he didn't care if the player ban on "jumpers" to the "outlaw" league would ever be lifted.

Pasquel also was quoted as saying:

"I may speak with Chandler while I am in the States—then again I may not. I don't care one way or another."

Harris to Get Writers' Award

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (INS)—The New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Ass'n of America announced today that Stanley (Bucky) Harris, manager of the World Champion New York Yankees, is the winner of the Bill Slocum Memorial Award for 1947.

This award, made annually, is given for high contribution to baseball over a long period of time. It will be presented to Harris at the association's annual dinner, Feb. 1.

It comes as a mild shock to note that the dapper Bucky is all of 51-year-old. Yet he has been in baseball since 1916, when he started playing with Muskegon, Mich., of the Central League.

Bucky made the grade with Washington in 1920 and played second base for the Senators until 1928. Before he had half completed this stretch of service, the former coal miner had displayed such qualities that he was appointed manager of the Nats in 1929 at the tender age of 28.

When the Senators won the pennant that year and went on to triumph over John McGraw's Giants in the World Series, Harris immediately was christened the "boy wonder."

Washington won the American League pennant again in 1925, but lost the World Series to Pittsburgh.

After the 1928 season, Harris moved on to Detroit where he was pilot from 1929 to 1933. For a brief spell in 1943, he switched to the National League where he managed the Phillies.

In November of 1946, Bucky was appointed field leader of the Yankees for 1947. His appointment proved a winning tonic for the Yanks. He was tactful and considerate, above all other factors.

M'Keever Decision Due 'Next Week'

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24 (AP)—Ed McKeever says he will know "early next week" whether he will return as head football coach at the University of San Francisco.

He was emphatic in stating on his arrival home from Chicago yesterday that he had not signed to coach the Chicago Rockets of the All-America Professional Football Conference.

At the same time, the former Notre Dame coaching assistant told interviewers: "I have one college offer—a good one—and another pro offer besides that of the Rockets. Don't guess from whom—I won't reveal them."

McKeever, who has compiled the best record of any USF football coach, said he would talk with the Rev. William J. Dunne, the university president, "and get some things straightened out." He did not elaborate.

His USF contract has two years to run.

Southie, H. P., Roslindale Share Ice Lead

Hyde Park, South Boston, and Roslindale, went into a three way tie for the District Hockey League leadership at the Boston Arena this morning as the circuit played its fifth round before 400 chilled spectators.

Hyde Park notched its third successive triumph of the campaign, a 5-2 victory over Roslindale in the feature tilt; Jamaica Plain High won its initial contest, edging East Boston High 1-0; and South Boston retained its unblemished slate when it handed Charlestown a 10-0 shellacking.

Hyde Park bolted to a two-point advantage in the first period on the merits of a pair of unassisted markers by Jim Walsh. Don Leavitt, who performed the vaunted 'hat trick,' insured the lead when he collaborated with Walsh half-way through the second chapter.

Second string wing, Billy Bissett, basked in the spotlight in the first frame when he accounted for Jamaica's lone but deciding tally. Bassett found the range in the closing stages of the period when he drilled a Jim Hufnagle relay into the meshing from 15-feet out.

South Boston enjoyed a field day as it scored freely in every period. Paul Marklis led the attack with four credits and an assist, while Ray Mazetis hit the bull's eye three times.

Ray Doyle, the Southie cage guardian, turned in an excellent performance at the nets, for his second shutout of the season.

Laughing Gus Mell Tops Star Card With Fusari

Gus Mell, Canadian lightweight, is still laughing. The likeable Mell was laughing and kidding when he came to Boston for the first time back in 1944 to fight Sammy Garcia in a prelim bout. He was laughing a year later when he beat Sal Bartolo in ten rounds in the Hub. He laughed himself out of about $75,000 which he won the hard way, fighting, and lost the easy way, laughing.

"Maybe I'm still laughing," said Mell last night," but I'm not laughing so hard. Take tonight for instance. I'm going to the movies with Morris Foreman, my manager. I'll do the laughing at the movies then I'll be in shape to do just a bit of giggling when I meet Charlie Fusari on Monday night."

The Mell-Fusari fight is one of the four headline bouts that will be presented by the Callahan A. C. at the Garden on Monday night.

All of the above fighters are top rated contenders but none have the smarting color and crowd appeal enjoyed by "Pell" Mell.

"I remember my first fight with Jerry Zullo here in 1945. I sure had crowd appeal that night," joked Mell. "I sat in my corner waiting for the bell to begin the fight. The bell sounded and I was out of my corner like a cat. I did everything right except one thing. I forgot to lift up my hands. I was knocked stiff by one punch.

Mell later came back and knocked out Zullo in five rounds. His knockout of Patsy Brandino here last October was another out of the ordinary bout. Mell was the class and he finished it with a rocketing right hand to the jaw which sent Patsy into a double somersault for the KO.

Pile-up Predicted In NHL Stretch Duel

By BILL GRIMES

Since the first of the year, the National Hockey League race has been a Mexican stand off, with Detroit annexing 11 points in 9 games, Bruins and Toronto, 9 in 8, Chicago 8 in 8, Montreal 8 in 10 and New York 7 in 9.

But, with the Red Wings and Maple Leafs, playing home and home games with Canadiens and Chicago, respectively over the week-end, and the Bruins and Rangers in action tomorrow night at the Garden, it's possible for the clubs to be more closely bunched when the standings are published Monday morning.

Usually at this stage of the race, one or two teams have games "in hand," but right now every club in the league has played 37 games. So, of course, they've 23 to play and the Red Wings and Maple Leafs, who are tied for first place, are 11 full games in front of the last place Blackhawks.

Judging from their recent performances, the Hawks have started to click under Coach "Chuck" Conacher. They are only five and a half games out of fourth place. If they have shaken off the "hex" Les Canadiens had on them, and continue to knock off Rangers, the Hawks can make the play-offs.

The Bruins will be at full strength tomorrow night. Jack Crawford worked out yesterday at the Arena and will be at his old defense post, for the game. He's the Bruins sparkplug and his return to active service will be very beneficial to the club.

Coach "Dit" Clapper will use the same forward line combinations as he did last Wednesday against the Maple Leafs. Eddie Sandford will center for Jimmy Peters and Woody Dumart. Don Gallinger, who scored both of the goals in the Bruins 2 to 1 victory over Toronto, will be flanked by Wally Wilson and Pete Babando. Milt Schmidt will be the playmaker for Kenny Smith and Billy Taylor.

Schmidt looked better on Wednesday than in any game since he was discharged from the hospital list. Apparently, he's satisfied that his knee is as strong as ever, for he didn't hesitate to step into any of the rugged Maple Leafs.

Jack Crawford, who has only played one period of NHL hockey in a month, will be used sparingly. He's the type that puts weight on rapidly when not active and it will be a week or 10 days before he is ready to take his regular turns on the defense.

Since their last appearance here New Year's night, the Rangers have broken even in a home and home series with the Hawks, beaten and tied Montreal, lost two decisions to the Red Wings and twice tied Toronto. They have lost four and tied one in seven starts this season against the Bruins, whom even Coach Frank Boucher admits, "beat our ears off."

The Bruins are trailing Rangers by two points and at the moment are in fourth place. But, if the Canucks take a decision from Detroit tonight, the Bruins will be in fifth place when they take on Rangers, but, of course, still only one game away from a third-place tie.

To a man, the Bruins realize that they must win tomorrow night. They received a wonderful lift from the victory over Toronto and are confident that the New Yorkers will be their 14th victim of the current campaign.

Holy Cross Five Faces Lavelli, Yale

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 24—The Holy Cross basketball team will seek its 11th victory of the season here tonight when the Crusaders face the Yale quintet. Holy Cross will be favored to capture its fifth straight win.

Coach Doggy Julian intends to stick with the same starting five which romped to a 76-49 victory over Rhode Island State last Tuesday. This team will have Frank Oftring and Bob Cousy at the forwards; George Kaftan at center; Capt. Bob Curran and Joe Mullaney at the guard posts.

Julian will be concentrating on stopping the Ellis' high-scoring Tony Lavelli of Somerville.

Fast Field in Derby's 'Race of Champions'

By JACK CONWAY, JR.

The Race of Champions, contest of speed skating giants, will again be one of the features of the Record-American-Advertiser Silver Skates Derby. The 13th annual speed skating festival will be staged one week from tomorrow at the Boston Garden. The first races will begin at 12 noon.

The race of Champions is composed of men skaters who have, in the past, won the coveted senior Silver Skates Derby one-mile championship. This Race of Champions is over two-mile course. It will field the classiest group of speed skaters ever to race in one event in New England.

Al Broadhurst, past winner of the midget, juvenile, junior intermediate, senior Derbies and the 1947 Race of Champions, will necessarily be the favorite to win again. Al has already won distance races at Hartford, Providence and Springfield earlier this winter.

Brother Frank Broadhurst, recent winner of the important Newburgh, New York, three-mile title will be a heated rival. Alex Gougen, for years a Derby ace, should be well up on the pack. Others in the race are Johnnie Simmons, Norwalk, Ct., Howard Shuck, Woods Hole, Earl Bloom, Norwalk, and Al Landry, Fitchburg.

The years that the entrants in the race of champions triumphed in the Derby are: F. Broadhurst ('47), Shuck ('46), A. Broadhurst ('45), Landry ('44), A. Gougen ('43), Simmons ('41), and Bloom ('36).

Other former champions who will not race this year are: George Wallace, Dartmouth ('36), Leo Lavelle, Providence ('38), Joe Fox, Lynn ('39), John Smith, N. Y. ('40), Clarence Gougen, Fitchburg ('42).

Recent entries received: Frances Capes, 7, Shirley ave., Winthrop; Albert J. Celts Disappoint Crowd By Dropping Off Top of League

The Eastern Division of the Basketball Ass'n of America continues to be a merry-go-round as the lead keeps changing hands daily. Two nights ago, it was the Philadelphia Warriors on top of the heap. Less than 24 hours ago, the Boston Celtics took brief hold of the No. 1 slot. Today, the New York Knickerbockers are in first place.

The Knicks regained the lead they relinquished earlier this week to the Warriors by scoring a decisive 74-58 victory over the local Celtics last night at the Garden before 5561, the largest paid gathering of the season.

It was a disappointing showing on the part of the locals who reached new heights Thursday night when they set back the Warriors. They were no match for the superior Knicks who scored their fourth win in five starts this year over the Bostonians.

Sid Tanenbaum, New York University record-breaking scorer, made his local pro debut with the Knicks an impressive one. He tallied 21 points, via eight field goals and five free shot conversions.

With the exception of an early opening period drive when they took a six-point lead, the Celts were unable to equal the pace set by the speedy Knicks.

The Celtics left this morning by plane for St. Louis where they play the Bombers tomorrow night.

'AHA Hockey Team Going Out on Ear,' Says Rival Coach

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 24 (AP)—Jack Hutchinson of Boston, manager-coach of the United States Olympic committee's ice hockey team practicing here for the winter Olympics, predicted today the rival club from the Amateur Hockey Ass'n (AHA) "is going out on its ear."

The sextet, endorsed by the U. S. Olympic committee, but not a member of the International Ice Hockey Federation, stole a march on the A. H. A. by getting to the Olympic capital first.

The A. H. A., which is a member of the I. I. H. F., has been accepted by the Swiss Olympic committee as the U. S. entry despite its blackball from the U. S. Olympic organization. The team is due in Zurich at noon Sunday. It is scheduled to play in Paris today.

Hutchinson said he had no quarrel with the A. H. A. provided it would admit it was a professional organization and would stay out of an amateur competition like the Olympics.

Malden Seeks 25th in a Row In Esmass Feature Tonight

By BOB WALDO

Malden High School, still shaking after last week's near defeat, will be skating for its 25th consecutive game without a setback in the feature of the Eastern Mass. League seventh round hockey contests at the Arena tonight.

This set of games will represent the semi-final card on the crowded weekend schedule, with only the Catholic Leaguers left to fill out the bill. They will bring down the curtain at the St. Botolph rink tomorrow night.

The Malden Tornados, by far the most aggressive club in the loop, will be faced with the task of passing the league's outstanding goal tender, Jan Sikora of Dedham. This 14-year-old sophomore goalie has kept his team in the runner up berth most of the season.

Undefeated in 24 games, Malden meets the only other club in the league that has yet to be beaten this year. Dedham shows a three win, three tie slate for the campaign to remain within reaching distance of Malden. A win tonight would bring about a stalemate for top honors.

However a victory is a 'must' on Coach Charlie McGeoch's list and Malden's first wave of 'Stu' Hersey centering, Don Duggan and Ed Stafford will be gunning to shatter scoring records. If any one of them should experience a bad night the defense combination of Len McNamara and Dick Buckley can be considered potential offensive threats.

In the event that Malden extends its streak, a win by Brookline over Natick would elevate the Wealthy Towners to second place in the standings. Brookline's hopes for an advancement rest squarely on the shoulders of its goal-getting trio, Tom Hines Jr., and the Buckley boys, Phil and Stern.

The Hudson-Wakefield tussle should draw some interest as the loser will tumble to the cellar in the standings. Wakefield has yet to gain its first win, although twice managed to eke two ties.

Malden Catholic, the second representative of that city to boast an unbeaten slate, will be after its sixth successive when it meets St. Mary's of Waltham on Sunday night's card. However the spotlight will fall on the St. Clement's-Central Catholic game.

Although only a sophomore, St. Clement's Dick Norton is proving to be the sensation of the league. He will be striving to raise his goal total several points in order to keep his club close on the heels of the Malden outfit.

The league's newest entry, Christphopher Columbus High, will draw considerable attention after its first ice victory in the history of the school last week. After tipping over the high-powered St. Patrick's six, they have an excellent chance of coming up with two in a row against the winless St. Mary's Club of Lynn.

Snowed Under—South Boston's High School hockey team, led by Paul Fisher (5) and Don Martin (20), carried too much power for a hapless Charlestown High six and as a result drubbed the Bunker Hill skaters, 10 to 0, in a District League game today at the Arena. Here, Fisher completes a play with Martin by sinking another goal for Southie. It was South Boston's third win in a row. STORY ON PAGE 21

Newton, Arlington in Hockey Riot at Arena

In a five alarm riot, Arlington High humbled Newton 3 to 1 in a wild swinging Greater Boston League brawl this afternoon at the Boston Arena before 3000 schoolboy fans.

After Arlington took a goal lead midway through the third round, tempers flared. After the full-fledged pier sixes that involved the majority of both squads, five partisans were banished with major penalties.

The cause was an overly vicious hoad check that was finally settled by officials Bill Cleary and Herb Gallagher after five minutes of rough house.

With true utter disregard for amicability when there is an opportunity for fisticuffs, Bill Fitzpatrick and Tom Kelley came off the boards swinging. Hardly had they dropped their sticks and plunged into the bout with smoking intensity members of both squads treamed into the fray. Referee Herb Gallagher, attempting to settle the brawl was dragged to the ice and severely pumelled before peace was restored.

Exiled for major sentences were Fitzpatrick, Coyle and Jepson of Newton and Shea and Kelley of Arlington. Though the squabble went to a no decision verdict, Arlington finally won the comparatively unimportant hockey game by virtue of Ed Emery's pair of last reel goals.

Hub Schoolboys Lose Out In Northeastern Track

Two favorites, both of whom Boston schoolboys, had poor racing luck as the 21st Northeastern University interscholastic track meet opened at the Garden this afternoon with a record number if entries scraping for the points which will bring them the title now held by Boston English.

Clyde Crawford, of Boston Technical, the lone defending individual champion was erased early when he fell at the starting line, and could never catch up, in the trial heat in the 50-yard dash.

Dick Dionisio, of South Boston, one of the favorites in the 45-yard hurdles, won his heat in 6.1 seconds, the time which it took Carl Vaccaro of Malden to capture the first final of the day. Dionisio lost in the final. It set a new record as a new height was used at 3.3. Formerly, the height used was 2 feet 6 inch.

Paul Pittsman of Lynn Classical equalled the meet record of 5.6 seconds to win in a tight race with Al Bartolucci of Somerville winner of this same meet two years ago. In the trial heat Bartolucci, clicked off the same time but in the final Pittman caught him two yards from the tape to push the string ahead of him.

Vaccaro cleared the timbers with deftness to beat out a classy field of hurdlers including Bob Parsons of Welmouth, who was second; Neil Smith of Lynn English, third, and Tom Flaherty of Boston English, fourth.
